When You Turn Over a Board

Irigoyen, Fine Man
What a Gorilla Could Do
Mussolini Is Surprised

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

OUR EUROPEAN FRIENDS, in their agitation over the President's message on money, remind you of boyhood days when you turned over a board, looking for fish worms, and all sorts of queer creatures darted and scampered annoyed by the sudden light.

Small nations, hanging to the gold standard by their eyelids, realize that they must let go, France, more powerful, because of her gold hoard, almost equal to ours, is described as "raging" and "in wondering amazement."

The solidly important news, for America, comes from England. Prime Minister MacDonald told Senator Couzens, American delegate, "cancellations are pouring into northern industrial England from all over the world. These cancellations are coming because of the cheap American dollar."

If those cancellations mean more orders for United States factories and farms and more work for United States workers we shall regret Britain's loss, but NOT regret our abandonment of the gold standard.

Britain's respectable Manchester Guardian, in an editorial headed "An Appeal to Anarchy," says "Roosevelt is playing to the home gallery."

To Americans that is a welcome change. Their government has been playing to foreign galleries long enough.

For the comfort of wobbly Americans, worried about their dollar, it should be made clear that Europe is annoyed because it knows our dollar will be GOOD as well as plentiful.

We are not on "the gold basis," but we have more gold in our government hoard than any other country on earth, even France, and we can get as much more of it as we choose to buy.

Back of our dollars there is more gold than there was before we left the gold basis, and back of it there is the REAL WEALTH of the United States, and its immense buying power and productivity that make it independent of the rest of the world. Others need us, we do NOT NEED THEM. PRAISE BE TO THE LORD.

Hipolito Yrigoyen is dead, one of the world's great and useful men.

He established the secret ballot in the Argentine republic, taking political power from a handful of land owners exploiting the workers, and transferring political power to the masses. The land owners have never recovered it.

He was twice elected President of the republic by overwhelming majorities, without ever making a speech or showing himself in public. He considered himself the real President of the Argentine to the day of his death, but he was old, past 80, and glad to escape routine and formality. He died on a plain, white, iron bed, in small apartment, one son and two daughters beside him, with a picture of the Virgin Mary over his head, a silver crucifix within reach of his hand. The Pope's benediction had been conveyed to him the day before he died.

Yrigoyen was a man of iron will and action, and Argentines like such men. When Germany's secret instructions to "sink Argentina vessels without warning" were revealed both Argentine Houses of Congress passed resolutions demanding war on Germany. Yrigoyen calmly checked their resolutions, kept Argentina neutral, and later took his country out of the League of Nations. Only Argentina and the Argentines interested Yrigoyen, whom his compatriots call El Viejo, their grand old man.

Mr. Broun's account of the Carnera-Sharkey fight should be used as a lesson in good reporting by schools of journalism. But two points invite criticism. First, writing for prize fight "fans," it was hardly fair to drag in Robert Browning without any label.

Second, Mr. Broun's statement that Carnera might beat a gorilla is not justified by anything in natural history or Du Chaillu's writings. A full-grown, red-haired gorilla of the Gaboon country, standing more than six feet high, on his short legs, measuring 80 to 100 inches around the chest, would destroy Carnera, Sharkey and Broun, all in three minutes. An orang-outang, no heavier than a light-weight boxer, would dispose of those three big men easily, unless hypnotized by Broun's gentleness.

Mussolini should be a man not easily surprised. He was a common soldier, badly wounded, and is now ruler of Italy's army and navy. He was a radical, as extreme as such a man could be, when turned in that direction. Now in Italy no radical dares to peep. Rising from misery

6 Feared Dead in Storm Lashing N. E. Coast

Six persons were missing and feared drowned today off the New England shore as the coldest July 5th in the history of the weather bureau, covering more than 160 years, brought with it a northeast storm, high winds and tempestuous sea.

Hundreds of small craft were dragged from their moorings, sunk or swept ashore. Coast Guards saved more than a score of vessels and at least a dozen persons.

Boston Harbor, the whole of Massachusetts Bay, the Cape Cod region, Narragansett Bay and Vineyard Sound were the scenes of many near tragedies as the wind, besides whipping the high tide to a fury, rose to gale force offshore.

Six persons are missing with the 35 foot cabin cruiser Farm-S, owned by Dr. Edmund A. Sayer of Providence, R. I. Coast guards from four stations are hunting the craft in and near Narragansett Bay.

The boat started yesterday morning from Providence with the doctor's parents, his brother, the latter's wife and their two children. They were due back in the afternoon, but were not reported missing until this morning.

Coast resorts near Boston suffered a severe pounding by the sea, and floods were feared unless the northeast wind shifted.

The temperature in Boston was down to 52 at 6 a. m. after which it rose but slowly. This was a low record, comparing with a previous low of 53 in 1927. Weather bureau attaches also compared it with a high record of 102 in 1918.

Twenty-five small boats were reported swamped or sunk along the Quincy shore from Squantum to Hough's Neck. As many more were driven on the beaches.

A dozen boats were adrift off South Boston. Several were aground. Coast Guards from City Point under Capt. Holbrook were kept busy saving vessels, including a 75000 cruiser, owned by Richard Spence, moored in Dorchester Bay.

Coast Guards saved the sloop Faith of Boston, owner undetermined, from pounding to pieces at Great Harbor, near Woods Hole, after the boat went ashore.

Staying Aftermath of $114,000 Robbery

A shooting which police believe may have some connection with a $114,000 gem robbery at Beverly in August, 1929, cost the life today of Michael T. Nixon, 45, in Philadelphia. Nixon was caretaker at the Philadelphia estate of Sydney E. Hutchinson, social registerite, whose Beverly home was looted four years ago. Byron B. Jones, negro, was sentenced to 24 years in prison for the theft.

Father of Gov. Ely Has New Setback

Governor Ely's 80-year-old father, Henry W. Ely, was "not so well" today, the Governor said when he arrived at the State House after a week spent with his aged parent. The elder Ely has been in poor health for some months and suffered a relapse a week ago.

KILEY'S TWO KILLERS GET LIFE STAY

Justice Brandeis in Unprecedented Move; Ely to Act, Too

U. S. Supreme Court Justice Louis D. Brandies, by an act that has no precedent in Massachusetts in the last half century, has signed an order staying the execution of Herman "Red" Snyder of the West End, now under sentence of death with John T. Donnellora for the murder of James M. Kiley, Somerville filling station attendant.

Justice Brandeis signed the order which gave new hope to the condemned men last Saturday at his summer home in Chatham, but the fact was not revealed until Snyder's attorneys consulted with Gov. Ely today.

RESPITE FOR BOTH

Gov. Ely said he would recommend a stay of execution until Nov. 15 in order that the Supreme Court might hear a petition for a writ of certiorari already filed by Snyder's attorneys. He said he would ask his council at its next meeting a week from today to extend the same respite to Donnellon, although no legal efforts have yet been made on his behalf.

Led by Leo J. Halloran, Abraham C. Webber, Louis H. Weinstein and Henry Fielding, associated in the defense of Snyder, went to Chatham on Saturday.

Stripped of legal verbiage, their petitions means that they offered reasons why they believed Snyder's constitutional rights had been violated. Justice Brandeis believed they had enough to seek a new trial and so signed the order. Approval by Gov. Ely and the Council is a matter of form.

NOT ON JURY VISIT

Snyder's attorneys claim that he was not permitted to accompany the jury who found him guilty when they were viewing the scene of Kiley's killing. They claim this was a part of Snyder's trial and that, under the law, the defendant had a right to be present.

Snyder and Donnellon have not been informed yet of the latest move to save them from the chair. They are confined to cells in the Cherry Hill section of state prison following their removal from the death cells when Gov. Ely granted a stay until July 14 on another petition by counsel.

There is pending now before the State Supreme Court a petition for a writ of mandamus to compel the Superior Court to grant a new trial on the basis of new evidence.

The appeal to the United States Supreme Court is based on an entirely different point of law. The State Supreme Court has ruled in Snyder's case that the defendant's presence when the jury was viewing the scene of a crime was not necessary, as such a procedure has been declared not a part of the trial.

The United States Supreme Court believes that this point is still debatable, and for this reason will hear Snyder's attorneys on the question.

OPEN CLASH LOOMS IN SHAKEUP

Crowley Acts Over Authority, Hultman Hints in Quiz

Indication that an open clash between Police Commissioner Hultman and Supt. Crowley may be impending came today during a police reporters' inquisition of the commissioner—the first time he has talked on the police shakeup following the grand jury's scathing report.

Although denying he and Crowley are at odds, Hultman emphasized in commenting on the removal of Dep. Supt. John M. Anderson from Lt. Stephen O. Gillis from the Bureau of Criminal Investigation by the superintendent that Crowley has the right only in detail men.

Yet Crowley has openly transferred Anderson and Gillis to comparatively minor police work—Anderson "aiding" in the teletype room and Gillis sorting mail—and has filled their B. C. I. jobs.

CHANGES HIS VIEWS

Hultman, during his questioning by the police reporters, at first said that he had only "general knowledge" that the order shifting Anderson and Gillas was to be issued. When the reporters caught him up on this answer, he swithched and declared he was "thoroughly aware of it an disproved of it." But the commissioner emphacized that he referred to their being detailed.

He denied that he had asked for the resignation of Leo Schwartz, his legal advisor and acting secretary, but when delegated to seek the

Duke Upsets Club Style to Keep Cool

London, July 5 (AP)—London's clubs were buzzing today over the renovation of the 62-year-old Duke of Marlborough who appeared at a banquet last night clad in white linen trousers, white shirt and a soft collar.

In the course of a speech the duke congratulated himself on his costume. He said kindly he noticed others present, properly attired in evening dress, were mopping themselves and undergoing the agony—in the prevailing heat wave—of hard collars.

Roosevelt's Program To Hold Money Rule Told in New Message

Washington, July 5 (AP)—President Roosevelt today talked over the telephone with Chairman Hull of the American delegation at the London Economic Conference in an endeavor to keep the conference at work; but he stood firm against immediate stabilization of American currency.

PRESIDENT STILL CONFIDENT

After the conversation, Mr. Roosevelt was said in high quarters to still have every confidence that the conference will proceed.

At the White House it was explained quite emphatically why the President will not consider immediate stabilization of the dollar, which has been demanded by the European gold bloc at the threat of disruption of the conference.

In an official source that knows, he was described as feeling to establish a stabilization fund and morally bind this country to export gold to back up the agreement, if it became necessary.

He is not ready to export gold or to enter any agreement that would morally obligate this country to export gold.

Mr. Roosevelt realizes that the question of stabilization of currencies in international exchange means much to some of the European nations, but does not regard it as a factor at all affecting the United States.

He is looking to an eventual permanent basis of stabilization, but holds to the opinion that such must come about first after each country has stabilized its own domestic purchasing power.

NOT ON PARLEY PROGRAM

The President does not regard the establishment of stabilization funds, as has been demanded, as on the agenda of the conference.

In seeking to establish the permanent purchasing power of the American dollar, Mr. Roosevelt is considering several factors. Some advisors have urged that the 1926 price levels be taken as a basis.

Others believe that level too high and point to 1925 and 1924. No fixed date of prices can be selected, Mr. Roosevelt believes, and a "mean average" is probably the solution.

WILL KEEP GRIP ON GOLD

In connection with Federal Reserve Bank operations to aid in temporary stabilization of currency in international exchange, it is the understanding at the White House that this is very likely impossible on the basis that the Federal Reserve Banks have no right to speculate in foreign exchange.

The President is going to keep a determined grip on the gold supply of this nation, which he intends shall be held as collateral for the American currency in contrast to the theory understood by him to be held in question abroad that gold should be used as a medium of international exchange rather than as collateral.

REFUSES TO YIELD TO GOLD BLOC NATIONS

Has Telephone Conversation With Secretary Hull

BULLETIN

London, July 5 (AP)—The United States delegation now favors recess of the world economic conference, an American spokesman stated this evening.

London, July 5 — After Secy. of State Hull had been in telephonic communication with President Roosevelt for a half hour this afternoon, the impression prevailed in important American quarters that the major part of the world economic conference would recess this week, leaving committees to carry on the technical work, possibly at Geneva.

In some delegation quarters it was believed that the movement to recess could be blocked in the plenary session of the parley, but that there was no point in trying to continue the full conference until the world monetary situation became easier.

Notice that France still insists upon stabilization despite President Roosevelt's opposition was served upon the American delegation.

BELIEVE NATICK MAN ALIVE

Medfield, July 5—Growing belief that Lawrence L. "Jess" Willard, business leader of Natick, is still alive, led the diver to quit his search today for Willard's body on the Charles river bed near "Death Bridge."

Dragging operations from a police boat were continued, however, under Lieut. Thomas H. Mitchell of the state police, the dragging being concentrated downstream from where Willard's wrecked car was found in the river.

Friends of Willard at the scene of the hunt told police that Willard had been in financial difficulties for some time, the police said, and that his summer home in Osterville on Cape Cod was foreclosed only a month ago.

Today's search was given impetus through the finding, earlier, of Willard's brief case near where the capsized coupe was found.

U. S. DELEGATES PLAN TO URGE RECESS FOR LONDON PARLEY

MOVE FOLLOWS RECEIPT OF ROOSEVELT MESSAGES

Bonnet announced he would lunch with the American delegation tomorrow, indicting last-minute negotiations to save the conference from collapse.

Leaders of the American delegation were understood to be preparing a statement to clarify fully the American position.

The President's stand, it was reported, was further reaffirmed in a cablegram to Hull last night, in which he urged the chief of the American delegation and his colleagues to do all in their power to keep the conference alive.

While the text of the President's new cable was withheld for the present, it was understood to strongly supported the views he expressed in his bombshell statement of Monday, when he called the conference sharply to task for neglecting the broad aims of the conference to concentrate on stabilization measures that can benefit only a few interested European countries still on the gold standard.

NO RETREAT BY U. S.

Indications were that the President had no intention whatever of retreating, despite the fact numerous European statesmen and newspapers charged that his statement has wrecked the conference.

De facto stabilization remains definitely out of the picture so far as the United States is concerned. But well-informed circles pointed out that the experts' committee would consider eventual stabilization, to which President Roosevelt has assented.

Thus, after six months, when America's domestic program has advanced sufficiently, it may be possible for the conference to reconvene in the light of changed conditions.

RECESS PROPOSED

A proposal was reported in the making to the effect the conference recess instead of adjourning sine die, after setting up several standing committees to pursue explorations of subjects on the agenda, lending themselves to further study, such as tariffs and silver.

Thus the fiction would be maintained that the conference is not a complete failure, but merely has been unable to arrive at useful accomplishment in view of existing conditions between gold and non-gold countries.

One member of the American delegation tried to put the situation in an optimistic light by declaring there was "a better atmosphere than yesterday." This was not very promising, however, as yesterday stygian darkness prevailed.

CABLE TO ROOSEVELT

Hull's cable to the President pointed out that the conference steering committee was in favor of adjournment as the result of President Roosevelt's anti-stabilization pronouncement.

The President's instructions were described as endeavoring to concentrate thought upon what it is possible for the conference to accomplish now, with a view to taking up the restoration of monetary stability at such time as attainment of the United States' inflationary objectives will permit.

During Hull's talk with President Roosevelt this afternoon all the American delegates except Prof. Raymond Moley were also missed from his suite while the conversation was inprogress.

Senator James Couzens, James M. Cox, James P. Warburg, Herbert Feis and others were obliged to cool their heels in the hotel corridor.

Moley was uncertain today whether he would be able to sail for home tomorrow as planned, but had not cancelled his passage at a late hour.

Pin Hope on Soft Words by U. S.

London, July 5 (AP)—A French Conference Delegation authority said today the gold bloc had by courtesy remained in London 15 days after it was apparent that Mr. Roosevelt would not stabilize the dollar at present. What are characterized as "the harsh words" of the President's message resulted in a decision by the gold bloc to go home, it was said, but soft words might change the atmosphere from dismay to understanding.

Parley Torpedoed by U. S. Says British Press

London, July 5 (AP)—Editorials in the British press today indicated little hope that President Roosevelt can have anything further to say which will refloat the World Economic Conference after the "torpedoing" he is accused of having administered to it by his refusal to consider currency stabilization.

The Daily Telegraph noted "a natural unwillingness of the American delegation to shoulder responsibility for an undignifiable breakdown of the enterprise which was launched with President Roosevelt's enthusiastic support—which owed so much indeed to his initiating state'smanship."

The Manchester Guardian said it must be presumed that Mr. MacDonald knew that Roosevelt may, if he is given another chance, unsay some of the crudities of his statement of Monday, and give the conference some token that American cooperation in monetary matters has not been withdrawn."

Both the News Chronicle, very positively, and the Daily Mail, more tentatively, consider the best thing the conerence can do is to quit for a time.

Paris Papers Blame America for Deadlock

Paris, July 5 (AP)—The Paris pres places upon the United States the responsibility for deadlock in the world economic conference.

Le Matin said today that Prime Minister MacDonald must have had a heavy heart in preparing for adjournment of the parley "for he is recording the death of his own work and opening the door to dissensions in the imperial family."

Newspapers called attention to the support given by the United States by Canada in the successful proposal for adjourning the sterling committee's conference meeting from Tuesday to Thursday.

Fliers Try to Spy Body -:- Lost in River Plunge

With his wife and friends believing that he is alive despite the fact that his auto was found at the bottom of the Charles river at the Medfield-Sherborn line, boy scouts and police took up the search for Lawrence Willard, 31, Natick business man. SON IS HELD IN SLAYING

East Haverhill, N. H., July 5—William Tibbetts, 55, arrested for the slaying of his father, D. Eldon Tibbetts, 81, will be given a hearing today.

He was placed under arrest after he had allegedly made several conflicting statements to police regarding his father. The father's body was found on an abandoned farm by a searching party. He had been missing since early Monday.

An autopsy showed that death was caused by two bullet wounds.

500 WALK OUT IN HAVERHILL

Haverhill, July 5—More than 500 shoe workers in six factories abandoned their work today to force the immediate payment of back wages they claim are due them as a result of the recent shoe strike settlement agreement between the employers and the union.

When the strike was settled several weeks ago, July 3 was set as the last date for the final payment of back wages, due since March 27, when a wage cut which caused the strike was put into effect.

The suspension of work by the 500 workers today came as a result of an order issued on Monday by District Agent Dennis A. Kelleher of the Shoe Workers' Protective Union that all who had not been paid in full were to report to the union headquarters at 9 o'clock this morning.

The workers who quit walked from their benches as directed by the union officials and marched in a body to the union headquarters.

Agents of the union immediately made preparations to call a conference with employers ,and it is expected that all of the workers will receive their back pay late today.

Everett Welfare Board Faces Ouster

Senators Demand U. S. Group Be Returned From London

Washington, July 5 (US)—America's delegation to the tottering London economic conference is urged by congressional spokesmen to come home and concentrate on bringing back prosperity in this country.

Senator Wheeler (D.) of Montana said the delegation "might as well come home, because they are not accomplishing anything over there."

He praised President Roosevelt's message to the conference, saying:

"I approve of what the President said 100 per cent. I am glad he called France's bluff on the foreign exchange stabilization."

Senator Dickinson (R.) of Iowa described the conference as a failure from the beginning. He demanded the Americans come home before America's independence is jeopardized. Dicklason said:

"Trade is so wrapped up with finance that unless a money base is found the delegation might as well come home and give up the conference as a bad job."

"The selfishness of foreign nations who demand the United States continue to give them trade advantages is the real cause of the difficulties at the conference, Speaker Rainey of the House said today.

Declaring the entire country is backing President Roosevelt in his firm stand on currency matters, Rainey asserted the United States can stand failure of the conference.

"Unless the conference points the way to restoration of world trade, he said, the United States inevitably will continue its high tariff policy under the Democratic administration.

"We can stand the complete failure of the world economic conference but other nations cannot," said Rainey.

Federal Pay Cut on Six More Months

Washington, July 5 (AP)—President Roosevelt today issued an order continuing the 15 per cent cut in pay of federal employes, first made to extend until June 30. It will now stay in effect until the first of the year.

The order said the living cost index for the first six months of this year was 150.2 as compared with 171 for the base period, the six months ending June 30, 1928.

FACTOR'S SON IS UNDER GUARD

Chicago, July 5 (AP)—Efforts were being made today to prevent the John Factor abduction from becoming a double kidnaping.

It was learned that whenever Jerome Factor, 18-year-old son of the missing international speculator leaves his hotel headquarters for the home of his mother, Mrs. Leonard Marcus, Factor's first wife, he is attended by two bodyguards.

This led to the suggestion that his father's kidnapers may have found the former Chicago barber an unsatisfactory hostage and might attempt to exchange his son for him.

Meanwhile, the strain of watchful waiting began to tell on Factor's second wife, the former Nella Cohen, who collapsed. She was ordered to remain in bed by her physician.

Dresses Cooler, So He Wears Them

Los Gatos, Cal., July 5 (AP)—Joseph Zurcher, husky 200-pound laundry worker, has a spirit of independence all his own. He wears women's clothes while working.

"They're cooler," he explained in a booming bass voice, "easier to put on and off, easier to kep clean, too. I've been wearing 'em for years."

GUSTIN SNEERS AS HE IS HELD IN $100,000

Gangster's Wife Is In Court But Can't See Surley Spouse

Stephen J. Wallace, alias "Steve" Gustin, leader of the Gustin gang, still with the same sneering smile for the officialdom he has defied for so long, was held in $100,000 bail today in Superior Court, for assault with intent to murder Police Detective Daniel McDonald.

Captured in New York after evading arrest for five months, Gustin made his plea of not guilty today loudly, eagerly, without even waiting for the clerk to finish reading the indictment.

SCORNS JAIL FARE

His lawyers begged for bail as low as $20,000 and said the prisoner's family would provide it.

The district attorney, through Asst. Dist.-Atty Frederick T. Doyle, asked that Gustin be held without bail because he had evaded arrest so long and because two of the gang have already gone to prison, for long terms, for the McDonald assault.

Chief Justice Walter Perley Hall finally set bail at $50,000, but with two sureties, so that the captured fugitive must arrange for $100,000 bonding before he can walk the streets again.

Gustin was led into court to be locked in the cage, with a deputy sheriff at each side of it, after a fretful holiday in Charles st. jail, where he scorned jail fare and sent to a restaurant for delicacies.

He was disturbed, too, because his wife had been refused permission to visit him in the detention pen of the courthouse before his arraignment.

FEAR OF OUTCOME

But as he walked into court beside Deputy Sheriff Hugh McCorkle, the scornful smile flashed and then came back on his lips to stay throughout the proceedings. Once or twice he smiled more broadly, looking at the reporters table.

"You are charged in this indictment with assault with intent to murder—" said Asst. Clerk Julian Seriac.

"Not guilty," said Gustin, stroking his sandy hair.

"Not guilty," said Gustin, again.

and prison to a place higher than the throne, which he protects. Mussolini has ruled destiny and might say with Napoleon, "Circumstances, I make circumstances."

But Mussolini was surprised when Colonel Easterwood, of the Texas American Legion, told him that Texas had a woman governor.

"What," he exclaimed, "can a woman run a State? And do you like her?"

Women have done well, ruling indirectly and as actual rulers, and will do better in future than men have done. Elizabeth was as powerful a ruler as England ever had; Victoria was the most beneficial ruler of her country; Catherine, the German-born princess, made a great ruler of Russia. A ruler's job is housekeeping on a big scale, and women understand that.

Mussolini forgot the words of the wise French king, defending the Salic law, which forbids any woman to sit on the throne of France:

"As long as a man is on the throne France is sure to be ruled by some woman. With a woman on the throne a man might rule, and that would be bad for France."

Dr. Lutz, who attends to insects for the American Museum, proves that bees and butterflies see colors invisible to human eyes. Ultra-violet, at the upper end of our spectrum, which we never see, is their favorite color. Proof was obtained by painting ultra-violet at the entrance to their hive. The bees went to that colored entrance, and, with the color changed, would not enter.

Dr. Lutz says bees "almost seem to think." Those bees, watching the giant doctor arranging his experiments, may have said to each other that he almost seemed to think.

Bees and other insects that were at work here, millions of years before men appeared, are supposed to have adopted mental grooves, now called instinct, and to have stopped learning.

Many human beings also live in mental grooves, have stopped learning and will not tolerate a new idea.

U. S. 'IMPUDENT OPPORTUNIST,' SAYS TARDIEU

Ex-Premier of France in Bitter Attack on Roosevelt Policy

Paris, July 5 (US)—Former Premier Andre Tardieu yesterday announced President Roosevelt's monetary policy as evidence of the "lunacy," "opportunism" and "imprudence," of America's post war policy. He called on France to renounce hope of collaboration and "to rely only on a maximum of French energy and common sense.

Heading his attack "complete lunacy," Tardieu, who hopes to regain control of the French government before the year ends, in a front-page editorial in his newly-acquired newspaper, La Liberte, states:

"For nearly fifteen years the United States has pursued a course of international imprudence to which we should become accustomed.

"Hoover and his moratorium, Roosevelt and his anger, reveal the same method. The monetary war has officially begun.

TREATY BREAK CHANGED

"It is now 15 years since the United States, all the while professing antiarchic pride, has been meddling intermittently in European affairs. Its iconoclastic fury of 1919, in breaking international agreements, multiplied a hundredfold the economic difficulties born of the war.

"Its stubborn efforts to relieve Germany so as to find an outlet for its own surplus was a principal factor in the German crisis and those which followed. Its faith in speculation and price manipulations aggravated the first phenomena of disequilibrium in 1921 and generalized them.

"Its role of having imperious and irresponsible observers at successive settlements of peace was the origin of economic and political trouble.

Roosevelt Tackles Home Problems

Washington, July 5 (INS)—Pressing domestic problems confronted President Roosevelt as he returned to his desk today after his vacation. He planned immediately to take over the helm of his national recovery program in earnest.

PRESSING PROBLEMS

The two most pressing domestic matters before the President dealt with the projects to be first begun under his industrial recovery program. The heads of the two major committees of the recovery organization, Secretary of the Interior Ickes, in charge of public works, and Secretary of Commerce Roper, in charge of the general industrial recovery committee, had already laid tentative drafts before their chief.

The two lists were carried to the President just after the Indianapolis brought him into Chesapeake Bay. Both Ickes and Roper hoped for an early decision by the President. The interior department head was called his conference together for a meeting tomorrow.

Dummy Gets Man in $50,000 Threat

Buffalo, N. Y., July 5 (INS)—Charged with attempting to extort $50,000 from Norman P. Clement, Buffalo capitalist, and philanthropist, Gustav Michel, 23, an unemployed steel worker, was held by police today.

Clement reported to police he had received three death threats signed "The 13 Hearts," directing him to toss $50,000 into the brush in a wooded suburban section. Police prepared a dummy package and took up their watch, resulting in the arrest.

MARY PICKFORD SEEKING RENO RESIDENCE, FRIENDS HEAR

SORRY FOR WAY THINGS WENT, SHE DECLARES

Denies Exchanging Cables With Doug, In England

Hollywood, July 5—Just one little report today made its way through the walls of silence and of denials with which Mary Pickford has surrounded herself—despite her presence as a hostess at the Los Angeles air races—since her announcement that she and Douglas Fairbanks had reached the parting of the ways.

While Mary was insisting there was nothing further to say, came word that Fairfax Crosby, Los Angeles attorney who represented Owen Moore 13 years ago in Mary's divorce suit, was looking for a strictly secluded residence in Nevada for an important client.

MYSTERY IS ADDED

Crosby admitted the truth of the report, but refused to name his client. He did say it was not Mr. Moore.

When asked whether it was true that U. S. Senator Pat McCarron, who represented "America's sweetheart" in the suit against Moore, was flying to that state, representatives of Mary simply said:

"She has taken no steps toward a divorce and we don't know that she ever will take any."

Mary herself said that she was letting things take their course.

"I'm sorry it had to come out at this time," she said, "but that's the way things turned out, and that's all I can say."

DENIES SENDING CABLE

Mary denied emphatically that she and her husband had exchanged cables regarding the possibility of a divorce.

Meanwhile, there are those in Hollywood who insist it will be just what they expect if Mary boards a plane and flies to Nevada.

A titled Englishman, recovering from the fatigue of a Reno divorce from an American chorus girl, today called Miss Pickford a gold widow because of her husband's eagerness to play a round with the Prince of Wales.

The titled one expressed surprise at word from London that Douglas was visiting the bedside of Lady Ashley, the former Sylvia Hawkes, once a mannequin and show girl, who is now ill in a nursing home.

HER PLANS INDEFINITE

"Strange," he said, "I thought he was interested in the Mountbattens, you know."

But in the face of this gossip Mary insisted that she was still at Pickfair, which she had announced for sale, and that her plans for staying there were indefinite.

It was learned today, however, that the house, Pickfair, is the sole property of Fairbanks, through a division of their holdings, made eight years ago.

Friends of the couple are agreed that possibilities of a reconciliation of the famous couple are remote. They believe the final decision of the couple to separate was made six weeks ago. At that time Fairbanks made a plane dash to Kansas City and joined his wife, who was bound for New York by train.

DOUG IN HIDING

The couple passed their last days together in New York and Fairbanks then sailed for London, where it was reported today that Doug has "dropped from sight." It also was reported that he spoke by transatlantic telephone to his wife.

Meanwhile the announcement of their marital difficulties has apparently started a divorce rush in the movie capital.

Two famous couples are reported as the latest whose marital ships are headed for the rocks. Carole Lombard is expected to file suit for divorce from her husband, William Powell, at almost any time.

The surprise to the movie colony, however, was the report of a contemplated divorce by Conrad Nagel and his wife, Mrs. Ruth Nagel, a non-professional.

Mrs. Nagel and their 15-year-old daughter are here and Nagel is playing with a little-theater group in Connecticut.

DIVORCE? HA, HA! I'M FLYING TO HIM

Thelma Todd, the Lawrence platinum blonde who made Hollywood sit up and say "Pretty, pretty—and mean it—ridiculed as ridiculous all rumors of a pending divorce suit between Pasquale de Cecco and herself. "He phoned me at 3 a. m. and I'm rushing to him by plane," she said. "Poor Pat" couldn't go abroad with her, but she has ended her visit home to fly to him.

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

"Why, we're disgustingly happy —I might add uninterestingly so!"

A beautiful smile, a wave of a hand on which glistened a huge diamond beside a platinum wedding ring, and Thelma Todd, blonde screen star, who went from teaching in Lawrence to fame in Hollywood, today in Boston dismissed rumors of contemplated divorce with Pasquale de Cecco.

"Poor Pat," she continued, affectionately referring to her husband, "he was so worried about the rumor he telephoned me at 3 o'clock in the morning of that out if I had stopped loving him.

SHED PUNCH HIS JAW

"But that's Hollywood for you. They won't let you be happy in Hollywood. And if you try to snatch a few moments of happiness around corners, they have four flat-footed sleuths trailing you to see if you are no the level.

"Say, you know, the columnist who made that crack about Pat and I contemplating divorce ought to get a punch on the jaw! And believe me, if I were a man, he'd get it."

She ridiculed the report that she had "out-Garboed" Garbo during her brief stay in her home town, refusing old-time friends and neighbors a sight of her and the metamorphosis which the cinema colony had brought in her.

"I am still the same Thelma Todd," she assured, "trying to get along and sometimes finding it difficult. You see, all my life I have nursed an ambition that some day I would go abroad in style. The offer from a British film company came along at the opportune moment and I grabbed it.

FAT COULDN'T GO

"Pat couldn't go along with me, so I went alone. At first I thought he wouldn't permit me to go alone, but he did. And so the wise-cracking key-holers of Hollywood decided we had split.

"Hollywood gives, but Hollywood takes; giving generously. Hollywood demands ruthlessly. Happiness there is transitory at best and it behooves one to get all the happiness she can when she can."

Miss Todd talked on as she waited to board an American Airways plane for New York, where she is to remain until Friday and then fly on to Hollywood to report for work on the 10th.

IN LATEST FASHION

Garbed in the height of French fashion, she was a fashion-plate in light and dark blue sport clothes intriguingly enhanced by a huge, swishing block handkerchief scarf and a sailor hat which fitted her head tightly, revealing but little of the wealth of golden hair that did much to enable her winning a beauty contest that started her on the road to film fame.

And then the screen star turned funster.

Acquainted with the wholesale contemplation of divorces by outstanding film stars in Hollywood, she laughed:

"Well, maybe I ought not to be too sure about this rumor of my supposed divorce. One never knows what's going to happen in Hollywood if you have been away for a little while. Maybe I ought to wait until I get back before I talk.

"And if it's true, I ought to be sharing publicity with all these others."

Although there is a supposedly unbridgeable gap between teaching and starring in films, Miss Todd admitted that at times she wished she were back in the class-room.

While in London, Miss Todd told of almost being run down by the automobile in which Douglas Fairbanks was driving.

Neither of the titled ladies mentioned by the fair Mary Pickford were with him, Thelma said.

"I had just s't my apartment and was crossing to the other side of the street to enter my car when this machine tore by me. I looked up and saw Doug at the wehel. He looked at me, smiled and kept on going."

With a final "divorce won't get me," the blonde beauty entered the plane for a "happy landing" on the coast within a week.

800,000 U. S. Teachers Enlisted to Fight Schools Slashing

Chicago, July 5 (US)—Teachers of America, 800,000 strong, are on guard to prevent the ruthless slashing of courses of study and school opportunity.

This was the declaration of Francis G. Blair, Illinois state superintendent of public instruction, in an address at the first business session of the representative assembly of the National Education Association.

Just as the slogan, "Women and Children First," is followed in disasters at sea, it would be well if the slogan, "Children First," were followed in economic disasters, Blair said.

"It would be fortunate if in this period of stress and retrenchment our consideration should be first for the children," he asserted.

"I believe that as long as the 800,000 teachers are on guard, the interests of the 26,000,000 American children will be safe."

The public school teachers are in the trenches ready to fight political and other corruption that threatens the schools, declared Willard E. Givens, superintendent of Oakland (Cal.) schools, in an address on "Teachers as Citizens." He urged political activity upon the part of the teachers to uproot graft and corruption.

TURNER HEADS RACE FLIERS

Municipal Airport, Los Angeles, July 4 (AP)—A golden monoplane with Roscoe Turner of Hollywood behind the stick, broke all precedent for speed flying at the National Air Races today before a crowd estimated by race officials at 50,000 by adding the two closed course classics of the races to his victory of Saturday in the cross-country dash.

The 210-pound speed flier, long a figure among the nation's outstanding racing airmen, flew to first place in the 100-mile free-for-all event at a speed of 241.051 miles per hour and swept down a straightaway course at 280.965 miles per hour today to make a clean sweep of the three principal races.

Saturday, he traveled from New York to Los Angeles in 11 hours, 30 minutes, to win the transcontinental race in record time, breaking his own mark of one hour and three minutes. He averaged 219 miles per hour.

ITALIAN FLIERS LEAVE IRELAND

Londonderry, Northern Ireland, July 5 (INS)—With a roar that shattered the calm of the Irish countryside, Italy's aerial armada of 24 seaplanes left Lough Foyle at 12:40 p. m. for Reykjavik, Iceland, third stopping place on the expedition's flight to Chicago.

Gen. Balbo expects to halt only long enough to refuel at Reykjavik, taking off as quickly as possible for Cartwright, Labrador, 1500 miles away, the longest hop of the flight.

The Italian submarines Balilla and Nicolo and other vessels patrolling this water leg, have been ordered to take their stations in the Atlantic.

Balbo also said he is considering a spectacular return from the United States by flying direct for Valencia, Ireland, out of New York, first stop on the return trip from Chicago.

He asked Miss Ponselle if she objected.

"My one obsession," she said, "is against anyone smoking while I am singing."

The prince promptly crushed his cigaret with his boot heel.

Actress Once Named in Fairbanks' Tiff Sure They'll Never Sue

Evelyn Brent, the film actress, who was accused of causing the Fairbanks-Pickford rift ten years ago, in Boston today expressed firm doubt if Doug and Mary will ever be divorced. "They're too much in love," she said. "They'll be reconciled."

Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks will never be divorced.

They will be reconciled.

Those statements, at first mildly astounding in view of the news from Hollywood, were made here today by Evelyn Brent, who has appeared in a number of pictures with Fairbanks, and was even accused—back in 1925—of causing a rift between him and America's sweetheart.

"Even today, Mary and Doug are more intensely in love with each other than any other people know," said Miss Brent in her rooms at the ouraine as she unpacked this afternoon.

THEY LOVE TOO MUCH

"It's really a shame that this present story about them should be getting all this publicity. It's all the work of scandal mongers.

"All this talk of Lady Mountbatten and Doug is stuff and nonsense. It's been going the rounds for years. Why, Doug loves Mary so much that he will not dance with another woman!

She punctuated her speech with a shiver. These northeasters are nasty if you have just arrived from New Orleans.

"These Hollywood rumors," Miss Brent began again, "are the all-best things! Why, once they said the nastiest things about me and Doug all because he had spent a night away from home. He was at Charlie Chaplin's house. I hadn't even seen him."

THEY AREN'T JEALOUS

Miss Brent said that there was still a great fondness between Mary and Doug, if not the ardor of their first love. And she was positive that the present misunderstanding—if there really is a misunderstanding—will soon blow over.

Miss Brent, the wife of E. P. Fineman, a Hollywood executive, is here on a personal appearance tour, being scheduled to take her bows on the Boston Keith stage.

She stands 5 feet 2, and weighs 105. Clothes? The mannish, sporty thing for fall and winter!

Having reconciled one Hollywood family, Miss Brent went on to do a good deed if When told of the reported break between Carol Lombard and William Powell, she held up her hands and said:

"Impossible!"

5 WIN DIVORCES BEVERLY MAN IS FOR CRUELTY SHOT DEAD

Had a visitor from Mars stepped into Norfolk Probate court in Dedham today, he might have gathered the impression that earthly husbands were far more helicose than any of the citizens of the war god's planet. The Martian would have heard five wives recite tales of cruelty to win decrees of divorce from Judge Joseph R. McCoole.

First came Mrs. Phyllis G. Baker of Milton, who accused Philip Baker, of Atlantic, of attempting to force medicine down her throat a month after their marriage.

They were married at Plaistow, N. H., on June 28, 1931, Mrs. Baker was give neutody of their one child and also $5 a week for its support.

Mrs. Madeline Bortolotti, of Norwood, also charged her husband, Fred, with cruel and abusive treatment.

She was telephoning her mother, she recited, when he tore her from the phone and hurled her to the floor, fracturing her nose. When she got up, he blackened her eye.

They were married in Boston Oct. 24, 1929.

Others to get divorces were Mrs. Patrician M. Minson of Brookline from Leonard, Mrs. Ethel Carr of Wellesley from George and Mrs. Myrtle Ball of Wellesley from Joseph Ball of Natick.

Germany Shows Increase

Berlin, July 5 (AP)—The census taken June 1, gives the population of Germany as 65,200,000, an increase of 2,700,000.

Michael T. Nixon, 50 caretaker of Sydney E. Hutchinson, wealthy broker and social registerite, at Philadelphia and Beverly Farms, was slain today t the door of the Douglas Hospital in Philadelphia.

Police are investigating the possibility that the shooting is connected with the jewel theft at Hutchinson's Beverly home in August, 1929, when gems valued at $114,000 were stolen.

A car bearing Massachusetts number plates was seen speeding away by Miss Virginia Turner, a nurse at the Douglas Hospital. Police believe the car was directed to the scene in the auto and there dragged out and killed.

Nixon was shot in Beverly next week, according to the Hutchinsons, who are now at their summer place.

Hutchinson is a son-in-law of Edward T. Stotesbury, noted financier and associate of the Morgan firm.

Shortly after the robbery of the Hutchinsons at Beverly in 1929, Byron H. Jones was arrested for complicity in the crime, but he was not tried. On other charges he was sent to state prison for 24 to 30 years.

Girls Tug Young Roosevelt's Coattail to Get a Smile

New York, July 5 (AP)—Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., sailed today on the U. S. liner Washington for a two months' trip to Europe—the graduation gift from his father, President Roosevelt. He was accompanied to the liner by his mother.

With young Roosevelt were George Whitney, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. George Whitney, the former a partner in the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co.; Drexel Paul, Jr., of Philadelphia, and Charles J. Symington, Jr., of New York.

"We are going to study the countries on our itinerary but not too seriously," young Roosevelt said. "This is really a pleasure trip and we expect to have plenty of fun."

As the liner shoved off from its pier, a group of the boys' classmates from the school stood on the pier and shouted:

"Take a second look at everything for us, Boss!"

While the President's son walked the deck with his friends before the ship sailed, a number of young women grabbed for his arm and tugged at his coat in order to attract his attention.

"I am a great admirer of your father," one of the girls said, "and I like you, too."

"Thank you," he replied, nervously fingering his hat.

About half an hour before sailing time, Mrs. Roosevelt kissed her son good-by and left "so he could be alone with his friends." She took a taxicab from the pier to her town house in East 65th st.

SCHWARTZ'S JOB IN PERIL; HULTMAN FACES GRILL

SCHWARTZ QUESTIONED

"Is it true that you're going to resign, Mr. Schwartz?" he was asked.

"You'll have to ask the police commissioner," he replied.

Q—Well, is it true? A—He'll probably answer that question for you.

Q.—Have you been ordered to resign? A.—Well, I'm still working here, ain't I?

Commissioner Hultman then came in and Schwarz edged out of the room.

"Did you ask for the resignation of Mr. Schwartz," the commissioner was asked.

REFUSES TO ANSWER

Q.—Is he going to be removed? A.—I'm not being quoted on anything.

Q—Well, has the Governor suggested that you get rid of Schwartz? A—The Governor has made no suggestions and I'm not going to talk about it any further.

Q—Is there going to be a general order on these transfers just made by the superintendent—the transfers of Anderson and Gillis? A—Not until they are made permanent—if they are made permanent.

Q.—Do you anticipate that they will be made permanent? A.—Supt. Crowley is conducting an investigation. Whatever decision is reached will be based upon that investigation.

Q.—Did you have any knowledge that that order was going to be issued transferring Anderson and Gillis. A.—Generally speaking, yes, although I don't follow closely every order that the superintendent issues. He has the right to issue orders as he sees fit.

DENIES EXACT LANGUAGE

Q.—Are you aware of the fact that the order read that the men were removed from their department, "after a conference with the police commissioner, the superintendent is directed to make the following," and so forth? A.—I don't think it did say exactly that, but I'm not sure. I will send for the order now. I don't know every little detail in the orders that he issues. He has the authority and perfect right to issue them and he does so according to his own best judgment. He probably used the routine language that he uses in every order.

Q.—Do you think that an order of this kind was a little one? A.—Well, I meant by that he has the right to detail any man to any place in this department.

Q.—Yes, he has the right to detail them, but how about transferring them permanently? A.—No, what I said was detail.

Schwartz then brought in the superintendent's order, proving the reporters to be right in their version of its wording.

AWARE OF REMOVAL

Q.—Then you were aware, Mr. Commissioner, of the action that was to be taken in moving Anderson and Gillis to their present posts? A.—I was thoroughly aware of it and approved of it.

Q.—What caused it to take place on a Sunday? A.—I don't know, but that was the superintendent's way of doing it. The transfers were the superintendent's suggestions and naturally it was up to me to concur with Him. He is conducting the investigation.

Q—Wasn't the action rather prompt? Well, you want prompt action, don't you, in a matter of such importance. You know that I've always insisted on prompt action when I think the situation calls for it.

Q—Some of the newspapers say there will be a lot of transfers and that officers sent away from downtown stations may be brought back again; are these stories correct? A—The news stories that I have read concerning transfers are not based on anything that was given out by the propr authorities at police headquarters.

Q—Will there be any general orders today? A—No.

SCHWARTZ MAY GO

Despite the commissioner's denial, however, rumor persisted at police headquarers that Schwartz is slated to be dropped in the new order of things.

There was also a report that old Station 4, in Lagrange st., which was closed when Divisions 4 and 5 were consolidated in the new building at Berkeley and Warren sts., South End, will be reopened and the division again separated, also that the planned consolidation of Divisions 6 and 12, South Boston, will not take place.

Already the power-retrieving hand of Crowley has affected Schwartz, it was learned today, the members of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation having been instructed to take orders from no one except the police commissioner, the superintendent or Deputy McDevitt, new head of B. C. I.

HIS POWER RESENTED

In the past, Schwartz has issued orders not only to this department but to others, as the "official spokesman" of the commissioner, and this issuing of orders by a civilian is known to have been resented particularly by the detectives.

Since he became legal adviser to the commissioner and broke with the office of the corporation counsel, to which he was once attached, Schwartz has been regarded, but not over-fondly, by the police members, as the "grand vizier of the fifth floor."

He has become a power in the department, and there are some who declare that much of the commissioner's overriding of Supt. Crowley's recommendations has been due to Schwartz's influence.

Another angle of the police panorama today was a report that, with Supt. Crowley back in power, a more thorough search will be made for an alleged $60,-000 "bagman" in the department.

The charge that such a "bagman" exists was made by Mayor Curley six months ago, the mayor declaring he had been told that this personage had banked $60,000 in two years.

HULTMAN FACES "CARPET"

An investigation launched immediately following Mayor Curley's charge, but not by Supt. Crowley, petered out and nothing came of it.

Gov. Ely arrived at the State House today, his first appearance in a week, and said that while he had not summoned Commissioner Hultman to the gubernatorial executive office, he would probably do so this week.

The Governor promised, before departing last week for his home in Westfield, that he would conduct a "housecleaning" in the police department as a result of the grand jury report, if he found that conditions warranted.

Meanwhile, in the detective bureau, battle plans were being laid today for a determined drive, at Supt. Crowley's order, against gangsters, racketeers, major criminals and crime in general.

The work is assigned to veterans, who returned to the fore in police work when the veteran superintendent turned the "saddling" of a grand jury report upon him last week into a return of his ignored command.

DONOVAN BOOSTED

Quietly, but with a thoroughness that is predicted to surpass anything of its like in recent years, Boston will be cleared of nefarious rackets and the apparent "immunity" of certain type gangsters, according to the plans.

Since the wording of an order of Commissioner Hultman last week gave Supt. Crowley full command, at the same time it charged him with responsibility for grand jury criticism, changes that he always advised against have been restored by the veteran superintendent.

The latest move of the superintendent was the assignment of Lieut.-Inspector Timothy Donovan as chief aide to Deputy Superintendent McDevitt in the bureau of criminal investigation.

Donovan replaces Lieut. Stephen J. Gillis, a Hultman appointee, whose removal from duty in the bureau, together with that of Deputy Supt. John M. Anderson, was recommended after an investigation by the Suffolk grand jury.

Although Supt. Crowley has made no public statement on his plans, it was learned today that the transfer of Anderson and Gillis were merely forerunners of moves that are to come.

Donovan Sent Solomon to Prison

The man who did not play second fiddle to the czar of Boston's racketeers, but who sent the late Charles King Solomon to the federal penitentiary on one occasion, took up his new duties as second in command of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation today.

The man who has the names and numbers of Boston gangsters, and their finger prints as well, assumed the post of assistant to Dep. Supt. James McDevitt, replacing Lieut. Stephen J. Gillis.

A man with a record of 32 years as a policeman behind him with 17 years in the B. C. I. now directs the work of ridding Boston of gangsters.

He is Lieut.-Insp. Timothy F. Donovan.

Tim Donoman, as he is better known, began his new duties in characteristic fashion at rollcall.

He commended half a score of detectives for outstanding police work in the last few months. But he told his 50 odd members of the department he expected them to work with him faithfully and relentlessly in making Boston too hot for racketeers.

An athlete in his youth, Tim Donovan today carried his 61 years lightly.

There is determination in his eyes. You can understand the statement of his associates, a tribute to his integrity, when you look into his frank, open countenance. They say of Tim:

"He wouldn't take even a broken cigar."

In the last 20 years, Donovan has recovered through his own skill as a detective more than $250,-000 in stolen furs.

Following the murder of Samuel Reinstein, New York racketeer, in a Back Bay hotel in 1929, Donovan unearthed a white slave ring which operated in Philadelphia, New York and Boston.

An insight into the character of the new aid to the head of the B. C. I. may be had from the fact that Donovan regards the results of his white slave investigation as the highlight of his police career.

"Following my discovery of the operations of the white slave ring, a racket responsible for Reinstein's death, the federal government and social service societies stepped in to help eradicate one of the worst types of crime on the books. That I regard as one of the most important things I have accomplished in my career."

LIEUT. INSPECTOR TIMOTHY F. DONOVAN

NORMANO IN LIBERTY FIGHT

Dr. Joao F. Normano, alias Dr. Isaak Lewin, an alleged fugitive from justice in Germany, in connection with a $750,000 bank swindle, filed a petition in federal court today asking that he be released from custody on the ground that he is being held illegally by United States Marshal William J. Keville.

The petition is signed by Judge A. K. Cohen of the Boston Municipal Court and Max E. Bernkopf of counsel for Normano, who has been held without bail at East Cambridge jail since January. It sets forth Normano was not delivered to the German government within two months after commitment and he is entitled to his freedom.

A hearing will be held in federal court Monday, Judge James A. Lowell presiding.

Triple Holiday Death Toll 185, But Fireworks Kill Only 7

By the Associated Press

America paid a greater price in loss of lives in its annual celebration of its independence this year than it did in the initial skirmishes of the Revolutionary War, it was revealed by a survey, which showed, however, a sharp decrease in fireworks fatalities.

A total of at least 185 men, women and children perished during the holiday, compared with the total loss of seven men at Lexington and 93 at Concord back in April of 1775, when the forces of the original colonies clashed with those of King George III.

In addition there were hundreds of cases of injured. New York City reported 670 treated at hospitals for fireworks injuries, but only a few of the victims were seriously hurt. Twenty-one were injured in Minneapolis.

Fireworks fatalities, however, totalled only 7, compared with 10 in 1932. Motor car mishaps contributed heavily to the total deaths with 82. Fifty-eight perished by drowning. Thirty-eight others died in other accidents.

Not only were the fireworks deaths less than last year but the total fatalities from all causes were 58 under the 1932 figures, and 298 under those of 1931, when the largest number died in recent years. The 1932 figures, however, were naturally large because of a three-day holiday.

The figures for 1933 by sections:

	Fireworks	Automobiles	Drowned	Misc.
New England	0	4	4	5
Mid-Atl. States	5	6	4	4
South	0	17	19	2
Southwest	0	10	1	5
Middlewest	2	22	23	12
Mountain States	0	6	1	7
Pacific Coast	0	17	8	3
Totals	7	82	58	38

Grand total—185.

"How much time do you want?" asked Judge Weston.

"Oh, all that you can give me," said Kershaw.

Insull's return to the United States is sought on charges in connection with the collapse of Utility interests in which he and his brother Samuel were interested.

Hotel Bomber Put Under Mental Test

Robert May, 24, of Brooklyn, N. Y., charged with attempted extortion from the clerk of a Tremont st. hotel, by threatening to bomb the place, was sent to the Psychopathic Hospital for 10 days' observation today by Judge Carr of municipal court. Dr. Edouard Sandoz, court physician, recommended it.

Chicago, July 5 (AP)—New York, Los Angeles and Chicago were in the lead today as 22 pairs of contract bridge players gathered for the second day's play in the finals of the World's Fair bridge pair championship.

The leaders: Milton Adler and Alfred Shernwold of New York, with 177 match points; Clarence A. Stronse, Jr., and Philip Ayers of Los Angeles, 176½; Jack Kravats and Robert E. Branigan of Chicago, 170. Maximum possible score was 280.

The tourney, to continue through today and tomorrow, was the last phase of a series of contests sponsored in 15 cities by newspapers, including the Boston Sunday Advertiser and Boston Daily Record, which are paying the expenses of the winning pairs.

Close behind the three leaders at the end of yesterday's play were three other teams from the same cities: Fourth, H. W. Wales, Jr., and R. W. Wales of Chicago, 169½; fifth, John Gerber and Banks Hanner of Los Angeles, 256; Frank F. Stark and E. Loewenthal of New York, 163½.

FARMER KILLS WIFE, SELF

Worcester, July 5—Dwight Whittemore, 42, farmer and man of odd work, and his wife, Marion, 41, were found shot to death in the bedroom of their home in Fiskdale today.

Police said they believed Whittemore killed his wife with a shotgun as she slept, then reloaded the weapon and shot himself.

The position of the bodies—Mrs. Whittemore's in bed, her husband's on the floor—indicated this, but authorities were at a loss to advance a motive.

Neighbors declared the couple had lived in perfect accord and had no pressing financial worries.

The bodies were discovered by the two children of the dead couple, Marcus, 12, and Seavery, 14, who said they did not hear either of the shots.

Straus Expresses U. S. Gratitude

Paris, July 5 (AP)—America's gratitude to France for aid in the war of independence was recalled today by Ambassador Jesse I. Straus at a ceremony at the City Hall celebrating the 150th anniversary of the treaties of Versailles and Paris.

The former treaty ended the Franco-British hostilities over the American Revolution, while the latter recognized the United States.

RIGHT FIELD

I WAS UP ON BOYLSTON STREET a couple of Saturday afternoons ago, along about supper time.

● It was a very warm June afternoon . . . so warm that I dispensed with all thoughts of a hot meal and made up my mind to enjoy one of those wonderfully good, crisp vegetable salads covered with delicious mayonnaise, some potato salad, and the other fine things I knew were on the Waldorf Supper Special that evening. I'm very partial to salads at any time of year, but for a hot night with a cool dessert, to my way of thinking, nothing goes quite so good.

● As I started through the door I found myself in amongst a group of stalwart young fellows, sun-tanned and healthy looking, typically of the athletic type. I followed as each grabbed a check and strolled up to the serving counter.

● All of a sudden, I became aware that each one of them gave their order without the merest glance at the menu. This was so unusual that I listened in on their conversation to the clerk, for beyond question here seemed to be a group who knew what they wanted without resorting to suggestion.

● One of them was a big, husky man . . . bigger than the average, deep-voiced, with a bit of swagger about him. "Champ" seemed to be embodied in his whole make-up. I wondered who he was.

● "You fellows give your own orders," said he. "I've lived in Boston and know all about Waldorfs. You can't go wrong . . . everything you get will be good. See if I'm not right."

● I suspect I know, now, who this chap was. I think he plays right field!

GARBO—"PRETTIEST FEET"

Filmland has laughed about the feet of Greta Garbo—but an expert now declares she has the prettiest feet in not only Hollywood, but possibly in the whole world. This is the declaration of Dr. W. Lee Austin, Dallas, Tex., an official of the Texas Chiropody Society. The feet of Kay Francis are selected as the second most beautiful feet in the film colony. Dr. Austin said of Miss Garbo that she shuns society so she can walk barefooted in her garden. Now for a new fad—

BODY HIDER IS HELD FOR JURY

Exeter, N. H., July 5—Admitting he hid his sister's body behind a stone wall after she was killed in an automobile accident, William Knowles, 41, of Hampton Falls, was arraigned here today before Municipal Judge Ernest Templeton on a charge of reckless driving resulting in death.

Knowles pleaded not guilty, waived examination and was held under $1,500 bail for the October session of the grand jury.

John Lightbody and John W. Eaton, both of Seabrook, N. H., were held as material witnesses. They obtained their freedom under bonds of $100 each.

Early yesterday, Knowles aroused Police Chief Ernest Crandal of Seabrook and blurted out that he had killed his sister. He took the chief to a spot on Folly Mill rd., Salisbury, where—behind a wall—was discovered the body of his sister, Miss Emma Knowles, 27.

Crandall said that Knowles was driving his sister home from a party when his car suddenly swerved from the road. The lurch of the car lifted her from the seat and hurled her head against a telegraph pole.

When the girl slumped back to the seat, dying, Knowles said he became panic-stricken, and instead of taking her to a hospital, as advised by friends, he concealed her body.

San Francisco, July 5 (USI)—As the climax to months of investigation by Federal authorities, the asserted head of a huge international narcotics ring will appear before United States Judge A. F. St. Sure today and plead guilty to violating the Harrison Narcotic Act, it is reported.

The man is Judah Ezra, once wealthy Shanghai importer, whose case previously had been set for July 12. The eleventh-hour shift in plans was learned from authoritative sources.

At the same time it was disclosed that his brother, Isaac Ezra, will plead not guilty to a similar indictment, and stand trial. It was reported that Isaac plans to waive a jury trial and submit his case directly to the court.

TWO DYING IN TAUNTON CRASH

Taunton, July 5—Grant Wilson, 65, and his wife, 62, of Staples st., this city, are dying in Morton Hospital following a collision of their light coupe with a truck operated by Stephen Jacobowski of Middle st., South Boston.

In the crash on County rd., in Berkley, near here, the left front wheel of the truck smashed through the door of the coupe and carried the car 100 feet, burying it up to the top of the hood in a swamp.

Passing motorists pulled the unconscious couple through the window of the car and carried them to Taunton. Jacobowski was unhurt. Wilson suffered concussion of the brain and possible fracture of the skull. His wife suffered a broken leg and multiple head injuries. Both are in serious condition.

Shoes for Booze Is Trade Laid to Blue Hills Woods Army

Like the character in the world's best known barroom ballad, members of the reforestation army at Blue Hills actually sold their shoes for "bottles of booze," according to Milton police who testified against John Tate, 27, of Rose st., Milton, in Quincy Court today.

Not only did the tree saleta sell their shoes for pints of local substitute for moonshine, but they had stolen the shoes, Tate was therefore charged with selling liquor and receiving stolen property.

According to Police Sergt. Norman Bowman, who made the arrest yesterday on a John Doe warrant, Tate had liquor, and four pairs of new shoes.

According to authorities in charge of the Blue Hill camp, new shoes began disappearing at the same time that members of the camp, mostly southerners, were appearing happier than was necessary.

In the evening, by the moonlight, you could hear those campers singing. In the morning, by the daylight, authorities could find the new shoes missing.

As a result, Tate will face court July 11 on a continuance, and explain his alleged bartering of booze for shoes.

7 SAVED AT SEA START HOME

New York, July 5 (AP)—Six men and a woman rescued off Montauk as their sloop, the Shawarah of Providence, R. I., was sinking, were en route to their homes today.

The tanker Yorba Linda, which was hove to in a gale near the sloop, picked up the party when its crew saw distress signals.

It docked at Staten Island with Mr. and Mrs. Edmund S. Parsons of Warwick, R. I.; Clark Freeman, son of the late John Freeman, nationally known engineer; Richard S. Pratt of Hingham, Mass.; William Crossley of Pawtucket, R. I.; Joseph Lawton of Peoria, Ill., and Walter White of Oakland Beach, R. I.

"We are thankful to be alive," said Mrs. Parsons, adding that none of their belongings on the Shawarah were saved.

The sloop left Cape May Sunday afternoon for Providence, but ran into a stiff blow. Off Montauk on Monday the wind strengthened and the craft began taking water over the side and through the hatches.

Mattern Searchers Flying to Alaska

Rolling Pin Champ Never Uses Hubby for Her Target

"What? Me beat my husband with a rolling pin? I should say not! I use my rolling pin to make good pies."

Mrs. Mary Stewart, 27, winner of the rolling pin throwing contest at Montclair Community Fair yesterday, laughed heartily at the question, put humorously by a reporter who interviewed the new title holder at her home in Holmes st., Norfolk Downs, today.

With deadly accuracy, at 25 paces, Mrs. Stewart three times toppled a dummy that bore a striking resemblance to husbands in general in the contest in which more than 50 married women took part.

"That was a remarkable performance," the reporter told Mrs. Stewart. "Did you go into training for the contest?"

"No, except as I said, just rolling pies."

"But that remarkable accuracy? Clean hits at 25 paces?"

The reporter had visions of greeting a wife whose rocker by the window had worn grooves in the floor while she waited, rolling pin in hand, for her husband to return late o' nights. He was nonplussed by the explanation.

"You say you developed your technique by just rolling pies?"

"Just rolling pies. I hit that dummy just by luck. And it wasn't inherited talent. Because my mother, Mrs. Louise Pemberton, was in the contest, and she didn't hit the dummy once."

"You mean," said the reporter, flabbergasted, "that you just rolled pies with a rolling pin and you hit a dummy at 25 paces?"

"Yes. I just rolled pies. And I was lucky. I own a beach chair and you can bet I'll let Charley, that's my husband, use it whenever he wants."

Mrs. Stewart's three children, Charles, 9; Harold, 5, and Phyllis, 7 months, who sat on the champion's lap, became a bit frightened when the reporter began to beat his chest furiously.

"Why, whatever is the matter with you?" Mrs. Stewart asked him.

YOUTH HELD IN TRUCK THEFT

Jacob Bornstein, of Lorne st., Dorchester, was under arrest here today awaiting the arrival of New York police, who want him on a grand larceny charge as a result of a story told them by his son.

Boston police were notified by New York officials that the son had entered police headquarters here and reported that a truck loaded with woolens valued at $7000 had been hi-jacked from him while he was driving to that city. They said he later admitted the story was false.

He is alleged to have confessed that he, his father and a man named John Flynn took the truck to New Haven, Ct., and placed the woolens in storage, planning to sell them later. Boston police arrested the father last night.

Town Finds Way to Halt False Alarms

Bridgewater, July 5—Here's one town that might be sounded by the well-known depression.

Not one false alarm was sounded here for the first time in the many years that 4th of July celebrations that can be recalled by Police Chief Thomas E. Moore and Deputy Fire Chief George Stevens. The answer is easy. They employed 35 members of the town's unemployed and stationed one at each of the 35 fire boxes in the town.

Roosevelt Didn't Learn New Deal at Harvard; Could Now

You don't learn everything in school.

Thirty years after the graduation of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, the man who changed "economic planning" from a phrase of theorizing economists to a concrete fact, Harvard today announced a course in the subject.

Chiefly concerned with such problems as the decentralization of industry, the distribution of population, co-ordination of transportation, systems, conservation and elimination of marginal lands, the course will study them in their practical application to the New Deal. Much attention is to be given to the Tennessee Valley project and similar governmental undertakings.

The course is to be given in the School of City Planning under the direction of Prof. Henry V. Hubbard. Actively in charge will be Asst. Prof. Arthur C. Comey, widely known for his city planning work for the federal government as well as Boston, Milwaukee, Houston and other American cities.

It is pointed out that this course, had it been given in the past, would have provided cities and states, perhaps even the nation, with such a wise plan of public works, that the depression's relief problem would have been comparatively easy.

Well, President Roosevelt went to Harvard too soon. But he seems to be a jump ahead of his alma mater on economic planning.

You don't learn everything in school.

Merchant Marine Call by Business Men

New York, July 5 (INS)—Maintenance of a powerful merchant marine was urged in a resolution made public today by the Young Men's Board of Trade.

The resolution pointed out that the need for a merchant marine fleet as an adjunct to the Army and Navy was demonstrated during the World War. Had the country not been able to commandeer interned enemy vessels, it said, it would not have made its force felt in Europe when needed.

After the nation acquired a merchant marine, the resolution pointed out, trade with Europe increased 50 per cent, trade with Latin America 200 per cent and trade with the Orient and Africa more than 200 per cent.

KNAVE'S GIRL

By Joan Clayton

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Young and lovely Patricia Warren employs the card skill she inherited from her late father to help support her stepmother and stepsisters by playing at bridge parties given by the wealthy Mrs. Eileen Sycott. Pat receives 50 cents an hour. Patricia meets Clark Tracy, her ideal, only to learn he is engaged to the socially prominent Marthe March. New Year's Eve Bill McGee, a small-time politician and thug, insists that Pat accompany him to a dance. They stop at a rival racketeer's place, where Bill demands settlement for infringement on his territory. He is shot and Pat flees in terror. Arriving home, Pat is put out by her stepmother, who says the police are looking for her. She meets Wally Edge and wins money with him as a partner. They have a date to play again.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"How do you know I am?"

Patricia was sorry the moment she spoke. For instantly Leda's eyes widened incredulously; instantly the other was full of eager interest.

"Why, Pat, you didn't tell me. What a cat I've been. Where'd you meet him? What's he like? Who is he?

"It was only fooling," muttered Patricia, furious at the avalanche of questions she had brought down upon herself.

"Don't kid me. You're red as a beet. Is it Wally Edge?"

"Wally Edge?" cried Patricia scornfully. "I should say not."

Her color was as bright as the other girl's had been. But where Leda's expression had been serene and proud, Patricia's was troubled and unhappy. Naturally she was thinking of Clark Tracy. For a moment the memory of that magic hour with him overwhelmed her. What would he think of her now? Nothing, probably. From the very first she had meant nothing to him. Why should he care what became of her? She did not intend that Leda should guess the bitter thoughts that thronged upon her. She evaded the other's eager questions, shaking her head again and again, until at last Leda shrugged and surrendered.

PHONE RANG

"Have it your own way, Pat. Would you like a manicure?"

"I'd love one."

They were in the middle of the manicure when the telephone rang. It was Wally Edge calling Patricia from the Hotel Beaucarme. He had arranged a game and wanted her help immediately.

"Who are you going to play?" demanded Leda curiously.

"Wally didn't say. He only said it would be a tough battle."

"Well, I hope you win."

"So do I," admitted Patricia ruefully. "I certainly need to win. I've got $20 in the world and rent due tomorrow."

She rushed on to the hotel. Wally was waiting for her in the lobby, seated beside a man and a girl. Patricia stopped at the threshold, feeling frightened, confused.

The second man was Julian Haverholt.

Patricia tried hard to seem unconcerned as she crossed the lobby but she was aware of how hard her heart was pounding. Wally Edge was smiling serenely, confidently. His confidence found no echo in the girl. She was angry and disturbed. She could not afford to lose today. How had Wally dared to think that he and she were expert enough to cross swords with Julian Haverholt? Didn't he know who Julian Haverholt was?

He did know. For as he rose he remarked, "You like to gamble with good players, Pat. We'll have a chance this afternoon to try our luck with the best. This is——"

MET BEFORE

"Miss Warren and I have met before," interposed Haverholt, stepping forward, hand outstretched. Wally opened startled eyes. The girl on the sofa, who had been bored and disinterested, looked up alertly. Clasping Patricia's hand warmly in his own, Haverholt continued, "It's been a long time since I saw you last, Patricia Warren, far too long."

His tone was accusing. Both words and glance suggested that they shared a common past, a past romantic if lightly melancholy, a past glamorously and unforgotten. Wally too was watching, his face wearing an expression of irritating knowingness. In her annoyance, Patricia did not know what to say or how to straighten out the situation, which she felt sure Haverholt had created deliberately. A moment later Wally gave her an opportunity.

He grinned and said, "You never told me that you two were friends, Pat."

"We weren't." Patricia remarked coolly. "I have met Mr. Haverholt only once before."

Haverholt was not rebuffed. His amused eyes rested upon her. With his facility for making her feel youthful, gauche and ill at ease, he observed, "You can't blame me for that, can you?"

"I wasn't blaming you. I was merely giving Wally the facts."

"Oh, I see," said Haverholt, apparently relieved. "Then you weren't suggesting that we are enemies now?"

ROSE ABRUPTLY

"No, I wasn't," conceded Patricia stiffly.

The other girl rose abruptly. "Do I meet Miss Warren or don't I?" she inquired.

"I'm sorry, Dorothy," murmured the bridge expert. He made the introduction. "Miss Warren, this is Miss Dorothy Luray, my secretary and my partner."

He faintly stressed the last words. Patricia remembered vividly the occasion when she had declined to accept the position that the other girl now occupied, and she suspected that the man was remembering, too. She and Dorothy Luray measured glances. The other failed to extend her hand. Patricia could not guess whether or not the omission was studied; still she decided that she disliked the thin, smart girl in the tweed and furs, decided further that the dislike was mutual.

"Well, did we come here to play bridge or to hold a reunion?" asked Wally restively. "I feel like a good hard session myself."

"So do I," echoed Dorothy Luray.

Patricia felt like anything but that. She was obsessed by a premonition of ill luck. Like most habitual card players she had come to have a superstitious belief in luck, had come to believe that in order to win one must feel right, must be convinced that the cards would run. Everything had started wrong this afternoon. She was certain of ultimate defeat, so certain she would have liked to refuse to play. Just then Haverholt said the very thing to hold her there.

Looking down on her, he remarked, "Remember the last time we played? You were lucky then. Today I warn you that I'm out for blood."

"Come and get me," returned Patricia.

"Brava," applauded Wally. As they entered the card room he crowded close to her and whispered, "Get in there and pitch, Pat. The Luray is nothing to write home about. I'd like to take Haverholt. If you're in top form all we need is a few of the kings and aces."

"You will need more than that," predicted Haverholt, disconcertingly popping up at his elbow. Wally went scarlet. Ignoring the man's confusion, looking straight at Patricia, Haverholt said a second time, "I'm out to win today."

It was like a threat.

There were many players in the room, already, bent over the green tables, absorbed, imperturbable as diplomats, their plaster-cast faces betokening a lack of interest in everything except the cards.

It appeared that no table was available.

"I'll fix it up," promised Haverholt and vanished.

"He will, too," Dorothy assured the others comfortably. Glancing at Patricia she said, "You don't seem especially anxious to play, Miss Warren."

"But I am," said Patricia decisively.

GIRLS, TRAPPED IN DORCHESTER FIRE, SAVED

Two persons were burned to death and thousands of dollars in property damage was caused by a large number of serious fires throughout Greater Boston over the holiday.

The victims were John Daly, 45, who was burned to death in his shack in Old Mills rd., Dorchester, and Mrs. Mary Ryan, 75, of Harrison ave., South End, who perished when fire swept through her home last night.

Two firemen were injured and two girls were rescued from a second floor porch during a two-alarm fire which destroyed a house in Half Moon st., Dorchester. The blaze, of undetermined origin, started in the first floor and worked through the entire house. Miss Mary Mahoney, daughter of the owner, and Miss Genevieve Tighe of Sargent st., Roxbury, a guest, were rescued by firemen.

Hoseman John Donovan sustained burns of the face and Hoseman James Powers was cut by flying glass. Damage was estimated at $10,000.

A general alarm was sounded for a $15,000 blaze in a six-family apartment house in Babcock st., Brookline. Occupants of the building were roused by the janitor, who discovered th blaze, and made their way to safety without trouble.

Cambridge firemen had a busy time with two serious fires and many smaller blazes. A two-alarm fire destroyed about $500 worth of lumber in the Dix lumber yard, Harvey st., while considerable damage was caused by fire in the home of Harry Drayton, of Wendell st.

Another Needham blaze destroyed the home of Luigi Nascio in Webster st. Damage from each blaze was estimated at $2500. Wellesley and Newton firemen aided the Needham department in fighting the blazes.

Daly was burned to death while sleeping in a ramshackle hut near the dump in Old Mills rd. The shack caught fire and the blaze spread to several other shacks. Daly's charred body was found by firemen.

Mrs. Ryan was trapped in her fourth floor suite when fire swept through the building at 652 Harrison ave. Her pet cat was found dead beside her body. Firemen were forced to use gas masks while fighting the blaze because of the thick smoke.

Parson's Drinking Makes Town Rich

Brighton, England, July 5 (AP)—Right of nominating to a village rectory a sporting clergyman who is not a total abstiner is a remarkable condition under which the corporation of Brighton, famous seaside resort, has received the bulk of the estate of Ambrose Gorham, well-known sporting bachelor squire who ruled over the district around the little Sussex village of Telscombe.

The value of the legacy was not disclosed but the condition reads:

"I direct the corporation shall prefer a man who is a sportsman and not a total abstainer. I particularly direct the corporation shall not seek the advice preferred by the bishop of the diocese or any church dignitary."

FIGHTS FOR AUTO BILL

Senator Newland H. Holmes of Weymouth says he will continue his fight for a law requiring the registering of bills of sale of all automobiles at the registry of motor vehicles at the next session of the Legislature. In addition to making Massachusetts a place where there would be no market for stolen cars, Senator Holmes claims such a law would operate against those registering in other than their rightful cities so as to escape higher compulsory insurance rates.

BOOKS---and Many Things

By Charles Hanson Towne

From a Southern town comes a letter from an aspiring author, in which he says:

"I have always wanted to be a writer. Now that I am out of college, however, and my time is my own—I have just enough to live on and keep the wolf from the door—I find, to my dismay, that I do not like to get to my desk of a morning. Hitherto I had dreamed of the day when I could wake up and rush to a clean white sheet of paper. I had ideas then, but I was too busy completing my education to jot them down. I used to say to myself: 'If only I had the whole day for my own what a lot I could accomplish!' But now, when it is mine, I suddenly turn away from the mechanical side of writing and want to do anything else under the sun—play golf, go motoring, or simply read. I'm not congenitally lazy, despite the fact that this is written from a sleepy little village; but I'm beginning to wonder about myself. Are all authors procrastinators? When I see how much some of them turn out—Tarkington, Hergesheimer, Mencken, etc.—I can't think that they are. They must work all the time! How do they keep it up and still keep in trim? And is there any hope for me?"

* * *

This young man's case is by no means exceptional. He wants fame and all the rewards of successful authorship; but he is not willing to shovel coal to feed the engine. How does he imagine anyone writes? By dreaming of it? By delaying, considering and courting inspiration?

He is like the singer who wishes to astound the world in grand opera but will not go through the drudgery of practising and studying foreign languages, to say nothing of learning how to act.

* * *

But let no novice think that he is greatly different from trained writers when it comes to the matter of actual composition. A celebrated novelist told me that never more than once, over a period of thirty years, had he felt that he was writing aided by some force beyond his own. There was a brief flurry of inspiration, or whatever you wish to call it, in the midst of a dramatic scene, and he wrote at white heat. After that it was just the same old grind, putting words together, one after the other, in the manner of a child building blocks. And the inspiration came on a morning when, above all things, he wanted to go out and play. If he had gone——

Even the poets work thus. They do not wait for a divine call. They like prose writers, know that something accomplished each day, whether or not it is retained, is the only way. It may be but half a line that is put down; but that is better than leaving a page blank. Of course, there are days—agonizing days—when nothing at all comes from the pen. But as a well-known English poety said to me:

"If the weather has its moods, if some days are bright and others are stormy, why should we mere mortals expect that we shall always remain in the same jubilant state? We are bound to have our off hours, maybe entire weeks of foggy weather. But use these for meditation rather than composition. They need not be considered as lost."

* * *

Keep busy, in other words. Note how diligent Arnold Bennett was, as he reveals in his journals. The pages of his long novels grew gradually under his hand, and the morning came when a book was miraculously finished. The habit of work can be acquired. Once that is accomplished, little else will matter to my youthful correspondent. He will get his greatest joy out of creating something each day, if it so happens that he was cut out to be a writer. If he wasn't, and if putting words on paper bores him, he may be sure that he will bore his readers—if he ever has any.

Just now he is in a natural state in his development. He says he is not lazy. He must prove that statement by producing something, and he must then prove the worth of what he has produced by offering it for publication. If it is of any value—if he has anything at all to say—it will meet with recognition. Hamlin Garland, in his youth, wrote for six years in anxiety and doubt, and so did many another now successful authors.

* * *

Pearl Buck, someone told me recently, knows every word of a book before she even begins to put the words down. Not many writers are constituted thus. With most of them it is a matter of piecing and planning, and often rebuilding after the structure is completed.

SKINS OFTEN GROW WEARY

Whether Skin Is Dry, Normal or Oily, Periodically It May Need a Stimulant

By Margaret Matson

SKINS GET TIRED just as we do. They get tired of combatting the dust and dirt and wind and sun, and of doing it without the proper co-operation of the blood stream that should flow swiftly enough to take away some of the poisons that threaten the glands.

You can readily understand that when one is tired, none of the functions of the body are 100 per cent efficient. And this applies to the skin as well. We say it's "sluggish," which means that the little oil glands are not working as well as they should, the pores are getting clogged, and the color of the skin is dull and lifeless.

Use of Ice

One well-known method of stimulating the skin is by the use of ice. After the skin has been cleaned with a cream or a soap and warm water, many women find it beneficial to apply either ice-cold tonic or else to rub the skin gently with a square of ice.

This is all very well for the skin that is sturdy enough to stand it—the skin that is weather-ed or toughened by being out of doors too constantly. But the use of ice is very dangerous to a thin, sensitive skin. It is too drastic, too violent a treatment and should be avoided.

There are stimulants on the market that are balsamic in nature, which are right for dry, sensitive skins. And there are others, stronger, for oily skins. You can judge which should be best in your particular case.

Rouse Blood

The action of the stimulant is to rouse the blood stream, to give it an extra urge, which in turn arouses the pores and sets them to working. We must not confuse stimulants with astringents or tonics, for their action are entirely opposite. The stimulant you apply after your cleanser and just before applying your nourishing cream in order that the pores might be wide open to receive the cream.

The astringent you apply after your cleansing, or after your entire facial treatment is over, in order that you may close the pores in preparation for make-up. The stimulant OPENS the pores, the astringent CLOSES the pores.

One good time to apply a stimulant is just before the use of a facial mask. And tomorrow we shall tell you of a good mask which you can make at home.

In the meantime, if you should wish us to suggest a good stimulant for you to use, please send a stamped, self-addressed envelope. And please specify whether your skin is dry, normal, or oily. Address Margaret Matson, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston. This column is continued next week in the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Beauty Queries and Answers

Forty Pounds

Dear Miss Matson: Will you please give me a strict diet by which I could lose at least forty pounds to get back my normal weight, which is about 126. I have tried dieting on my own—however, I have never followed a diet prescribed for me. My weight is pretty evenly distributed, but I am somewhat broad through the bust. Unless I lose weight I believe that I'll become ill. I have difficulty in breathing freely. Sincerely, Miss L. M., Roxbury, Mass.

Dear Miss L. M.: I am not publishing all of your letter, as you see, but I hesitate to give you any of the regular reducing diets which I might suggest. For you, I should go to a doctor, and have him prescribe. You are doubtless doing too much experimenting.

His Red Nose

Dear Madam: Your article in the Boston American attracted my attention. I should appreciate it very much if you could help me. My nose, unfortunately, is red, and I have tried creams, but they seem to do no good. Naturally, this is a source of embarrassment, and I should like to correct it. Sincerely, A. R., Winthrop, Mass.

Dear Mr. A. R.: Red noses are often the sign of digestive disorders or poor circulation. That may be the reason that creams do no good. If you are not in good physical condition, correct this and you will correct the redness of your nose. Also try bathing it in a 5 per cent solution of alum. Try massage. And later, try hot and cold applications, alternately. If none of these help, you may have to resort to electrical treatment.

Waistline

Dear Miss Matson:

I love the new clothes with wide belts around slim waists, but alas, Miss Matson, I have a thick waist, and the lovely wide belts just seem to show it up all the more. What can I do about it? Sincerely, Miss R. T. Waltham, Mass.

Dear Miss R. T.: Here is an excellent exercise for reducing the waistline. Lie on the back on the floor, hands under the hips, lift the right leg high, roll to the left touch the floor with the toes, leg stretches. Roll back and repeat. Same with left leg. It is the muscle pull as well as the rolling that slims down measurements, creates the stream lines.

The Marry-Go-Round; When Gods Laugh

By HELEN ROWLAND

PEOPLE APPEAR to be divided into two classes, these days! Those who would give their eye-teeth to get into the limelight—and those who would give their fortunes to keep out of the newspapers and dodge the photographers.

There are times when a man's love-making is so finished and technically perfect, that the only response is Helen Rowland arouses in a girl is the impulse to applaud his talent.

The gods always smile on lovers; but when they look down on one of these summer week-end infatuations, they don't know whether to weep or to laugh out loud.

Lots of us keep going, these days, on the luminous hope that eventually Lady Luck will run out of lemons, and begin flinging a few plums at us.

A bride usually steps right into her mother-in-law's shoes. If her darling's mother walked around on egg-shells and made a doormat of herself, in order to make "Junior's" life a bed of roses, any girl he marries will have to take over that job.

If girls continue to be so ardent and men to be so coy, it will soon reach the point where a woman will have to promise a man a jewelled wrist-watch and cross her heart "never to tell" before he will PERMIT her to kiss him.

Daily True Story

Radio Trouble

"THAT DANGED RADIO," complained Mr. Perkins, his stocking feet perched on a dining room chair, "is slowly driving me batty. Music—music—music! Talk—talk—talk!"

Shoving his glasses up on his forehead, he glared distastefully at the offending instrument, and then turned his near-sighted eyes belligerently on his wife.

"Now, Pa," soothed Mrs. Perkins, looking up from the woman's page of the evening paper, "don't take on so. Seems to me as if you could stand it when it's about all the amusement Mary and I get." She returned to the paper. Pa Perkins complaint about the radio was nothing new to her.

"It's good music, ain't it, Dad" defended Mary, "and the talkin's not all so bad."

Mr. Perkins' shoeless feet clumped to the floor; he sat erect and pointed his pipe defiantly at his daughter.

SPOKE BITTERLY

"Listen, young lady," he said bitterly, his straggly moustache bristling like a suddenly opened fan, "I ain't been well since we got this machine. I find I've got pyorrhea, athlete's foot, and halitosis. And your mother's hair and complexion ain't what they might be, an' she's got dishpan hands. And you—we ain't raising you right you're a—a juvenile problem."

"Pa!" Mrs. Perkins looked up from her paper reprovehfully, "I can't read with you chatterin' like a magpie."

Fifteen minutes later the music of Ronnie Ronney's orchestra wobbled uncertainly and quit with the noise of a dozen dying cats. From the radio came a loud, coarse voice.

"Line up again' the wall, everybody, and keep quiet. The first one that makes any noise gits drilled, see? An' don't try to git away—we got all the doors covered."

"Smash that micerphone," shouted another rough voice.

"It's a holdup!" cried Mr. Perkins, jumping to his feet. "Where's my slippers?" Finding them by his chair he began to thrust them and ran through the front door to the street.

"Pa," screamed Mrs. Perkins from the front porch, "where you goin'?"

"After the cops," shouted Mr. Perkins over his shoulder, the slapping of his suspenders against his ribs urging him to greater speed. He tore madly down the street, pipe in one hand, slippers in the other, loose slippers slapping on the pavement. A block and a half from home he staggered, winded, into the Fourth Police Station.

"A hold-up! The Kit Kat Klub's being held up!" he gasped to the sergeant, collapsing in a chair.

Two minutes later he was in the patrol wagon, going ringing, siren shrilling, careening the few blocks to the club. A policeman retained a firm grasp on his arm.

"We brought you along," shouted the patrolman, over the noise, "in case this is a gag. You don't look like you came from any night club."

"Sanay—if this turns out of he one of them radio drammers . . ." The policeman tightened hi grip on Pa's arm.

From the entrance to the Kit Kat Klub to the sidewalk extended a canopy, with canvas sides reaching to the ground. The patrol backed over the walk, its open rear against the mouth of the tunnel. The officers piled out.

"You two stay here," curtly commanded the officer in charge. "We'll go in the back—if they run out here, get 'em!" He reached in the door to snap the button extinguishing the canopy lights. Mr. Perkins was entirely forgotten.

Inside the club no band blared. All was ominously quiet. A minute later the silence was shattered by the sharp crack of a pistol shot. Running footsteps approached the entrance. Pa Perkins peeped into the dimply lighted foyer. Four men, guns in their hands, were plunging for the door. Pa wondered briefly about his insurance, and stuck his foot in front of the first man. He fell. In the darkness the others fell over him. The patrolmen pounced on them, disarmed them.

GETS $500 REWARD

"Nice work, little man," commended the Sergeant when they had returned to the station house. "There's a five hundred dollar rewar for the leader of this gang, and it's your's."

His wife and daughter awaited him on the front porch.

"Don't let me forget," he said, snapping his suspenders thoughtfully, "that I'm goin't to get rid of that radio tomorrow."

Leftovers of Holiday Salmon

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Wednesday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB.

I ENVY YOU if you were one of the fortunate few that had some cold boiled salmon left over from yesterday's celebration. Offhand I can think of 142 delicious things that can be made with a foundation of this succulent cold fish, besides croquettes, salads and au gratin dishes.

For a hearty dish, line a buttered bread pan with warm steamed rice, fill the center with the cold boiled salmon, flaked and well-seasoned with salt, pepper and a dash of nutmeg. Cover with a layer of rice and place the pan in another pan in about ½ inch of hot water and bake in a medium oven for one hour. Turn out onto a hot platter and serve with your favorite egg sauce.

Ours is made by melting 2 tbsps. of butter, adding 3 tbsps. of flour, ½ tsp. of salt, ¼ tsp. pepper and 1 tsp. of lemon juice. To this add 1½ cups cold water and bring to a boil, stirring every minute. Now add 3 tbsps. of butter in small bits and last of all two hard-boiled eggs cut in quarter-inch slices or the beaten yolks of two eggs and 1 tsp. of lemon juice.

Salmon Loaf

(Cooked Fish)

1 lb. cooked salmon.
1 cup grated bread crumbs.
2 eggs, beaten.
½ cup of milk or stock.
1½ tsp. onion juice.
1 tbsp. fine-chopped parsley.
½ tsp. salt.
⅛ tsp. paprika.
1 tsp. lemon juice.

Mix all together thoroughly. Turn into a mold lined with buttered paper and cook as all timbale or custard mixtures. Serve turned from the mold, with Hollandaise, tomato or drawn butter sauce. Slices of hard-cooked eggs, or chopped pickles, capers or pieces of cooked lobster meat or shrimps may be served in the latter sauce.

New Ideas for Speedy Girl Athlete

Sport activities demand a natural freedom of the body, which is a difficult art without especially created undergarments. There must be just enough restraint to confine one's figure, and an airy quality about the fabric so one can feel as cool as the proverbial cucumber. The sun shines with pride on those in the accompanying sketch.

Some inspired and envious woman must have dug into friend husband's wardrobe chest to copy his mannish trunks, as you see sketched—downright masculine but cut to fit the female figure! We nominate them for fame. They're loose enough for active sports, free enough not to hinder long-legged strides down rolling fairways—or mad dashes after hard-placed shots on the court. They come in sheer wair be broadcloth, madras, nainsook and fine mesh as shown. The fitted band buttons in front, is adjustable in back. No need for a slip—these are long and full.

Here's another amusing idea—shorts and skirt (a petticoat, too) of bright plaid silk! The skirt has non-skid shoulder straps—these shorts, too, are full and a good length.

No matter how perfect your limbs, stockings have a way of slipping unless evenly supported by long garters. With hot weather at hand, you'll approve of the new garter panties worn by the young girl at the lower right. Two sets of garters are attached to the two-way stretch waistband. The panties themselves are a fine open-work mesh—light as a feather.

The spiral-fashioned bandeaux and girdle on the lower left figure both slip over the head. In the hand they look as small as knitted mitts! But they do a miraculous job for the figure, hugging it as you'd never believe possible of such light little things! They're cool and comfortable, and "belong" under sheer evening clothes as well as under more hardy cottons for sports.

Last but not least, one of the most popular garments of the year—the tiny lace two-way stretch panty at the upper right. Never mind a girdle—this panty gently pushes little pouches of fat into place for you. They're the pet rave of all the young people who wear them.

DIET WAY TO A BEAUTIFUL SKIN

The 12-Day Diet for Skin Beauty.

FIRST DAY

After your morning bath drink two glassfuls of hot water, to which the juice of one lemon and a speck of salt have been added.

One and one-half hours after the bathing period, take two teaspoonfuls of milk of magnesia in one glassful of cold water. And one hour following the milk of magnesia, take this mixture:

½ glass strained orange juice
½ glass milk
Combine orange juice and milk, and stir.

The total liquid intake at one time should be 8 ounces, allowing about 4 ounces in a half-glass.

Before 8 in the evening of the first day, instead of the last glass of orange juice and milk, drink another glass of cold water containing 2 level teaspoonfuls of milk of magnesia.

Take a warm bath before retiring, and use particular care in doing a thorough and excellent job on the nightly routine of cleansing and nourishing the skin of your face.

SHORTNESS OF BREATH

Undue Alarm Often Caused

By DR. R. S COPELAND

ABNORMAL SHORTNESS of breath, or "dyspnea," as it is called by the physician, is often the cause of undue alarm and anxiety. To most persons shortness of breath means heart trouble, but this is not necessarily true; shortness of breath is frequently found in individuals who have no disease of the heart or lungs.

It is commonly seen in persons who are high strung, nervous, and under constant mental strain and worry. During the World War many soldiers were found to complain of shortness of breath and vague pains around the heart. The condition was called "soldiers' heart." It was caused by the severe strain to which these men were subjected. It is also encountered in civilian life.

Dr. Copeland

In what I have said, I do not mean to imply that shortness of breath should ever be ignored. When present, with vague pains around the heart and swelling of the ankles, it is nature's warning that you are working too hard and your heart is tired. My advice is to consult with your doctor who will determine the cause and prescribe for you.

Hardening of the arteries is a common cause of shortness of breath. When certain changes occur in the blood vessels they become hard, and lose their normal elasticity. This places an additional burden upon the heart and the sufferer notices that he has difficulty in walking up steps and must stop to catch his breath.

He cannot walk quite as fast as formerly without complaining of shortness of breath. At times he may have pain around the heart.

Bear in mind that shortness of breath may be normal under certain conditions. But it warrants a visit to the doctor. He will determine whether it is a sign of some disturbance within the body.

Health Queries

Mrs. G. G. Q.—What causes frequent headaches?

A.—This may be due to a number of causes. It would be well to have a thorough physical examination to determine the cause.

A. M. P. J.—I am a young woman and have had a jerking in my left shoulder for about three or four years which has lately become more persistent. I am losing weight and seem to tire easily. Sewing or ironing seems to aggravate the trouble—what would you advise?

A.—This is probably due to neuritis. Rest should give increased comfort until your doctor locates the underlying cause. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

A slow pay customer sent the following excuse to his garage mechanic: "Please send car; if okeh, will send check."

Boy Should Tell Plans, Says Miss Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

What would you do if you were placed as I am? I have been keeping steady company for a year and a half with a young man for whom I care a great deal. He professes to love me, but will not commit himself in any way; yet we have come to a partial understanding.

Two years ago I was in a sanitarium and was discharged as apparently cured, but this uncertainty has caused me a nervous strain and has, in a sense, brought back some of my former trouble. Should I let this man go, for my health's sake, as I want to go away for a while to rest and build up my strength again, and be able to do and enjoy myself generally, or how is it possible for me to find out if he cares enough to marry me?

WORRIED.

Dear Worried: You're very sensible to go away, and not let the uncertainty of such a situation imperil your health. Meantime, this young man should tell you his plans. You're certainly entitled to know. And here are my best wishes that things come out the way you want.

Embarrassing Moments

The American will pay $1 for each embarrassing moment sent in and printed. Address Embarrassing Moment, Boston Evening American, Boston.

I bought a new dress for a time at my daughter's school. After being seated there for about ten minutes, you can imagine my embarrassment when the man in back of me tapped me on the back, and said: "Madam, you forgot to take the ticket off your dress."

Eruptions and Blotches to Vanish

A natural, glowingly healthy skin has often been an "Open, Sesame" to the land of romance and dreams-come-true, and as such is worth spending some time and care in achieving. The Twelve-Day Diet for Skin Beauty, is patterned after those advocated in the fashionable European capitals, at a cost of many thousands of dollars to the users. If faithfully carried out to the last detail, the diet will help cleanse the blood stream of impurities and restore to clearness a skin marred by eruptions and blotches.

Since for two full days a strict liquid diet precedes the actual system-reconditioning food diet, a good physical condition is a requisite to the complete success of our purpose, the restoration of a healthy skin. And as in any standard diet, sometimes it is good to have the family doctor's "Yes, go ahead!"

Etiquette for Lighting the Cigarette

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you kindly inform me if it is good form to light your own cigarette first?

K.

No. We should light the other person's cigarette first. And this is true in spite of all the superficial arguments against it.

Telegram of Good Wishes

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. I have had a young man teacher in high school for two consecutive years. He is to be married this summer and I would like to know if it would be correct for me to send him a telegram of congratulations? Although I have never met the bride, I should send it to her her home, shouldn't I?

How would it be addressed . . . Mr. and Mrs. Smith?

2. What would be the most appropriate thing to say?

F.

1. This would be a pleasant and thoughtful thing for you to do, and I am sure that they would very much appreciate it. The telegram should be addressed to Mr. and Mrs. Smith, even though you have not met the bride, and should be sent to the home of the bride.

2. Some message of this kind: "Every good wish to you both for your happiness always."

Yrigoyen Family in Row Over Funeral

Buenos Aires, July 5 (AP)—Clothed in a monk's white tunic, the body of Hipolito Yrigoyen, who died Monday, lay in state today in his humble flat, while the government and his family fell into a spat about funeral honors.

The government, as a result of Yrigoyen's alleged implication in a revolutionary attempt last December, refused to permit exhibition of the former president's body in a public place.

The cabinet, however, decreed a national funeral Thursday noon, saying it was the government's duty "to conform impartially to the established custom."

The family then declined to accept the funeral honors, whereupon Minister of Interior Melo said they would be conferred anyway.

Thin Burglars Keep Chelsea Police Busy

Chelsea police today started hunt for a new Fagin following the discovery of the burglary of the store of Samuel Weinberg, 90 Essex st.

The place had been entered during the night by taking out a small pane of glass in a rear window, and looted of $9 in cash and a quantity of cigarettes.

The fact that burglars have gained entry to a number of other places in the district through similar small openings leads police to the belief that the older burglars are using a small boy as their accomplice.

Odds and Ends

ABOUT SEVEN years ago, reports Buster Rothman, the town of Bayonne, New Jersey, had the dubious distinction of harboring a young man who was probably the world's champion bad boy. Flanagan was the lad's name, and he had been arrested 63 times in the space of one year!

Mr. Flanagan, however, was not a criminal in the real sense of the word. That is to say, he never robbed nor harmed anyone—nor did he take money for writing a column. He was simply an all-around general nuisance, and all of his charges were misdemeanors.

The elder Flanagan had long since departed to his just rewards and, after her son's 63rd arrest, his mother took the situation in hand. She lectured him long and lengthily.

"What's goin' to become of you. I'd like to know?" she wound up. "Aren't you ashamed of yourself and the things you are doin' to your poor old mother? Do you think it's nice to have people whisperin' and sayin' things behind my back on account of you?

"That a son of mine should be arrested the way you have! Are you bein' fair to me—or to yourself? Haven't you a spark of decency in your body?"

Well, believe it or not, Mrs. Flanagan put the deal across. To the amazement of the press and public of Bayonne, the boy found himself a job the following Monday morning. He went to work as an assistant to a boiler maker—and remained on the job for one entire week!

As you can well imagine, there wasn't a prouder or happier woman in town than Mrs. Flanagan.

When pay night arrived, however, so did trouble. Mrs. Flanagan sat at home and waited for her son to come home with the all-important envelope, but the young man failed to arrive.

Tossing a shawl around her shoulders, she journeyed over to police headquarters. That pay envelope was worrying her a great deal. She entered headquarters and spoke to the man behind the desk.

"Good evenin', sergeant," she said. "You know me. I'm Mrs. Flanagan. Has my boy been here?"

The sergeant yawned.

"No, Mrs. Flanagan," he said, "but you can sit down and wait." . . .

QUESTION and answer from the "Modern Etiquette" column of a daily paper. Clipped and forwarded by J. M. Josefberg:

"Q.—What is the order of procession at a wedding?

"ANS.—First the ushers, two and two, according to height, the shortest leading; then the bridesmaids, also two and two, also according to height; then the maid of honor alone; then the flower girl, and last the bride on her father's arm."

WITHIN a short period of time New York has witnessed two of the most important fistic battles of the year. The Schmeling-Baer fight, staged by Jack Dempsey, was one. The Sharkey-Carnera go, under the leadership of James J. Johnston, was the other.

In the handling of the respective battles Dempsey made Johnston look like a sick pup. The former champ, by his courtesy and decency in a trying situation, made any number of new friendships that will repay him handsomely in years to come. Johnston, on the other hand, bungled everything so brutally that the general effect was sickening.

By his arrogance and neglect Johnston probably lost half his friends on this occasion. And even the other two aren't as friendly as they used to be . . .

* * *

INCIDENTALLY, speaking of the financial frost that Johnston staged, both the Milk Fund and Uncle Sam's tax collectors might be interested in learning that plenty of punched tickets for this fight were sold for any price they would bring.

On the day of the fight, several of the ticket agencies were offering $15 ringside seats—all of them with the three little holes—for $12. Outside the bowl, an hour before the fight, you could have purchased a carload of these punched ringside tickets for as little as $3 a seat!

"DEAR Mark:" writes Carlyle Winter. "Within recent months I have become a columnar fan. Not only do I read your stuff, but I grab quick looks at every column that I can find. And would you like to know what interests me most?

"It's the letter columns that you birds get away with. You fellows get paid for writing columns, and then sneak over a lot of readers' letters on an unsuspecting public every once in awhile.

"I'll say one thing for you, Mark, however. You are the most honest of the lot. The very title of that weekly column: 'In Which the Customers Do the Work,' proves that. You're candid, if nothing else.

"Even that title, however, could be improved. Why not call it: 'In Which the Columnist Works the Customers'?" . . .

THE passing of Roscoe Arbuckle was something of a shock to me. I never knew the man intimately, but our meetings were always extremely pleasant. He seemed to be a regular guy—and the best proof of that fact was that everyone liked him. When you're not regular they always catch up to you sooner or later.

Arbuckle got a rough deal in life. He was yanked from the heights and shot to the depths with such rapidity that I sometimes wonder how he managed to survive the ordeal. And for what? For doing something that happens in every city, in every state, in every hotel on every day of the year. For staging a drunken party.

But Arbuckle got the rap that most party-givers are fortunate enough to miss. In his case a sick girl died. And the holier-than-thous swooped down upon the man with such vengeance that they deprived him of a livelihood for many years.

Why—and for what? Roscoe Arbuckle was never convicted of any crime. He never had the slightest intention of committing any crime.

Too bad that Arbuckle had to go when in the very middle of an attempted comeback. It was just another bad break in a pretty tough life. . . .

Buck Passing Starts When Book Lists Are Sought

—By ROBERT E. ROGERS—

"My Dear Professor Rogers,

"Would you be so good as to suggest a reading list in your column?

R. E. ROGERS

"Among my acquaintances are some who for the first time are without prescribed reading. At college they were interested mainly in economics and related subjects. Then most of them went to law school, where they read largely of legal matters. Now, once graduated, they feel, and rightly so, a great literary lack.

"As an English teacher I was requested to make a varied reading list of classic and modern books. As I sat down to the task, it occurred to me that there must be many young people in a similar position, who would appreciate a reading list. I therefore ask if you would devote a section of your column to this subject."

I can't say as I blame the young lady, who has been asked to make a reading list for her friends just out of law school, for trying to pass the buck to me. It is exactly what I should do in her position and what I shall probably try to do, myself, later in this column. For the making of book lists there is no end and most of them are pretty useless.

No Book List to Fit Everyone

When a student of mine asks me for a list I can occasionally do something for him, since I have learned something of his capacities as well as of his tastes and his lacks. But a request from a stranger, especially if by letter, leave me feeling like a pants manufacturer who gets an order for "a pair of pants for a man who wears a 14½ collar." Or an interior decorator who is asked to suggest a color scheme for a room when he does not know the shape, the windows or the furniture available.

There is no such thing as a "book list" which, like the bed of Procrustes, will fit everybody. A useful book list must be a function (as the mathematicians say) of a particular individual, put together in terms of his interests, his temperament, his reading experience and (most particularly) his reading lacks.

My correspondent details a too common and a rather sad story; that of a group of young people who are trained but not cultivated, who have been so intent on a bread-and-butter education that they have never thought of reading anything but "prescribed" books. Now that there are no more prescribed lists they do not know what to do. They have no background of the accepted classics and they cannot read contemporary literature intelligently, because one author's name means no more to them than other's. Now they want a list!

Perhaps the chief characteristic of a really educated and cultivated person would be that he or she would never think of asking for a book list. Wide and varied reading would have been a natural part of his education. He would have developed his power of association of ideas in terms of important and useful writers and their books. He would have made it a practice for several years past to read a book review page regularly, learning to recognize authors' names and to remember their works and to link in his mind one writer with another. So one book would naturally lead to another, and presently he would have in his memory a kind of mental map of what contemporary writers are worth reading as opposed to those who are only worth paying three cents a day for at the corner drug store lending library.

One Needs Guide to Select for Any Reading

In matters of modern literature each one of my correspondent's friends will have to build up his own reading list by paying attention to magazine and newspaper book reviewers. For American writers of our own day I made this spring a list of eight lecture outlines and book lists for a university extension course. This set of outlines could be procured from the Division of University Extension, the State House, Boston, Mass., for a small fee.

In matters of general literary background, the field is so enormous that it is well to say, once and for all, that the average person is ill-advised to try to master it. Much better to find out what sort of literature one is interested in and to concentrate on that. It may be poetry, drama, fiction, history or biography. It may be the ancient classics, or English, or French, or Russian. Better to know one field reasonably well than to have a merely bowing acquaintance with the long list of so-called essential books —the books that "every educated man or woman ought to know." I do not believe very much in that sort of thing any longer.

Nevertheless, one needs some sort of compact guide, full of exact guidance for any sort of reading you may want to do. And exactly here is where I pass my buck on to the Houghton, Mifflin Co.

This Boston firm of publishers has just issued what I honestly believe to be the single most useful and detailed readers' guide I have ever examined—and I have examined a great many.

It is called "What Books Shall I Read?" and is an American revision and elaboration (by F. K. W. Drury of the Carnegie Library of Nashville) of a famous English guide to reading by one W. E. Simnet. You get not only the classics here but all the characteristically American material. It is not an "uplift" book in any sense of the word. It assumes that a person wants to read good books in many fields but does not know what they are and, more important, does not know how to set about finding where they are.

Through Various Classes of Literature

There is a fine chapter on using a library, how to understand the card index, how to use magazines and newspapers and what the best ones are. There is a chapter on the standard reference books, with special attention to book lists! There are advices on buying books, lists of inexpensive series, and so forth.

Then, chapter by chapter, the authors take up the various classes of literature—history, biography, memoirs, etc., travel and the useful arts, science, religion and philosophy, the ancient classics, the romances, modern literature, poetry, drama, essays, fiction by countries, and children's books. Each chapter is crammed with titles of specific books, both of general reference and popular reading. I think that any serious reader could find under any single head enough material to keep him reading usefully for a long time.

As I say, it is the most practical and helpful book of its sort I have ever seen. It will be invaluable to librarians and teachers and writers. And it may well prove to be the most useful single book a man or woman can buy for a small private library. For here between two covers is a complete road map for the whole Domain of Literature.

With this book by your side you need never ask again for a list of books. You can make them out for others and steal the credit.

INNES' DAUGHTER FLOORED BY RIGHT TO CHIN

UNUSED SHIP WAYS. HAVE BEEN IDLE FOR OVER NINE YEARS

Lack of work—inactivity in various departments of the Boston Navy Yard, has allowed cobwebs to flourish in the navy headquarters over there in Charlestown. Mythical cobwebs that seem to cover the great old boat ways (shown above) are just symbolic of idleness and discarding of yard equipment. For years these ways, located between Piers 6 and 7, have not been used. When one steps into many unused buildings cobwebs are about everywhere. Scores of buildings are not being used. They are not needed.

ASSISTANT TO CAPTAIN OF THE YARD WATER FRONT

JOB FOR A GLAZIER

The office of the assistant to the captain of the yard is in a dilapidated condition. You will note several windows broken.

Navy Yard Almost Deserted As Thousands Wait Work

—T. S Eliot.

Those lines that Thomas Stearns Eliot, then just out of Harvard, wrote when he saw Venice, the Lion of St Mark, stripped of her glory and her power instinctively come to mind today as one enters the gate of the Boston Navy Yard in Charlestown.

Here where once half dozen great battlewagons rode at anchor extending their guns ... wings over a brood of destroyers and submarines and minesweepers and lesser craft, the only sign of activity is the marine on guard at the main gate.

NOBLE 11,000 NOW 1100

Even the roadstead is virtually empty. Only the Bear, historic veteran of the iceberg patrol that once served Admiral Byrd, the destroyer Reuben James under repair, the Eagle Boat No 19, assigned to the Naval Reserve; the Coast Guard Cutter Mohave, no naval vessel, and the yard's receiving ship Southery are there.

The yard's shops present even a more dismal picture. Not so long ago there were 11,000 men hard at work here. Today there are a scant 1100. And the shops are, after all, the heart of the Navy Yard. It is a place where ships are built and repaired much more than a base for fleet operations.

WILL BUILD SHIPS

But work in Charlestown's historic drydocks—one of them was built under the first President Adams, another under Andrew Jackson—has been at a virtual standstill for months now.

Drydock No. 2, one of the largest in the word, is empty. Old lumber is piled in the building ways between Piers 6 and 7. It is the same almost everywhere you look —canvas stretcher over idle machinery to protect it from the ravages of weather.

There is talk, of course, that things will change under the new construction orders of Secretary Swanson. Two destroyers are to be built. The keel of the 354, ... known, after ... McDonough, was laid ... Drydock No 1.

DESTROYER ON WAYS

Much of the framework is ... means work for a few ... men ... specifications for the ... ver, the 354, are be ... yard now. Eventually that will mean work for a few hundred more men.

No further work is due at the yard until July 24 when the destroyer Henderson will arrive here for repairs.

But today the few civilian workers who have not been "furloughed"—a genteel word for "laid off" are busy in the rope walk and the chain factory.

There is work for a few more ... gray ... repairing broken windows that are not used, scraping rust off ... winches sweeping cobwebs from locked doors.

Yes, the army of spiders is always busy.

HORSE CRASHES POLICE HOME

Police of the Milk st. station, who ... yesterday ... was the fault ... which was being driven ... of The ... Boston. The animal threw a shoe at State st. and Atlantic ave. and became frightened and bolted. In his mad dash the animal dragged his truck onto the sidewalk.

At Milk st. the heavy truck crashed into the side of the police station, jolting the officers inside out of their calm. They rushed outside in time to see the animal crash his wagon into the window of the Eastern Steamship Co.

CHILDREN VISIT POISON WIDOW

Mrs. Jessie B. Costello, of Peabody, cheered by the Fourth of July visit of her three children, today started final preparations for trial Monday on charges of slaying her husband, Fire Capt. William J Costello.

By special permission of the Salem Jail authorities, the children were allowed to stage their fire works display in the jail yard so their accused mother might see the happy expressions.

According to present plans Mrs Costello will go on trial Monday after several postponements. She is charged with administering cyanide poisoning to her husband last February.

Ice Cream First With Children

Having made the discovery, Congressman Arthur D. Healey of Somerville has a good yarn to relate to colleagues when he returns to lawmaking at Washington.

"We want ice cream," shouted most of the 5000 children as "The Gentleman from Massachusetts rose to address them at the Fourth of July celebration of the Inman Square Business Men's Association.

True to political tradition, Congressman Healey made ... promise. He briefed his speech, the children quieted and the ice cream was served.

CHELSEA WIDOW FOUND DAZED

Mrs. Lucy Foss, 46, Chelsea widow was found in a semi-conscious condition in a doorway in Huntington ave., Back Bay, by police early today.

She was taken to City Hospital where it was found she was suffering from a possible fracture of the skull and lacerations of the scalp. Her name is on the danger list.

She told police she had been struck by a truck. Later she changed her story. Police are investigating the cause of her injuries.

Ely to Demand Hard Liquor Law of Present Session

Gov. Ely will send a message to the Legislature insisting that before prorogation laws to regulate the sale of hard liquor be drawn up and placed upon the statute books.

The governor said today Massachusetts should be prepared for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. He feels a delay until next January, when the Legislature meets for its second session, would mean new laws would have to be drawn hurriedly which would not be to the best interests of the state.

The Legislature has not shown much interest in tackling the hard liquor problem and the impression has been allowed to exist that the committee on legal affairs would study the problem during the recess of the Legislature.

In addition to sending a special message on hard liquor, the Governor said he had some other things he wanted to take up with that body. What these other things are he did not care to say at this time.

House Passes Bill to Ease Income Tax

The House today passed to a third reading a bill changing the state income tax assessment date from April 1 to Jan 1 and permitting the tax to be paid in two installments, namely on July 1 and Dec 1. Under the present law the whole tax is due in October.

The change in the law under the bill moved forward today, would not take effect until 1934.

Fourth Keeps Lynn Firemen on Jump

All records of former July Fourths were broken in Lynn yesterday with approximately 200 alarms being sounded at Central Fire Station in Broad st., fire officials said today. Of the total more than 30 alarms were needless. About 80 were bell alarms the remainder being "still."

Beer Fee Refund Bill Passed

Refunding of fees to applicants for beer licenses upon withdrawal of applications or non-use of such licenses is provided for in a bill engrossed today in the House.

The bill has been through the Senate.

BRIGHTON MAN GANG VICTIM

Because the victim said he was unable to aid them, Brighton police were baffled today in the investigation of a beating administered to Thomas E. Walsh of Gardena st., Brighton, as he walked through Litchfield st., in that district.

Walsh told police a gang "just jumped on him." At City Hospital he was found to be suffering internal injuries, fracture of one rib and numerous cuts and bruises.

Malden Legionnaires Win Championship

Malden's American Legion drum and bugle corps returned to their home city today bearing the New England championship, which was awarded to them in a contest conducted yesterday afternoon in the Municipal Stadium at Portland Me.

The contest, which was witnessed by thousands, followed a four-mile parade which was a highlight of the Maine State Legion convention.

STORY OF CRUEL BEATING WINS HER DIVORCE

Stevens Punched Her at Home and in Cab She Charges

Charging cruel and abusive treatment, Mrs Constance Stevens of Brookline, daughter of Charles H Innes, Back Bay Republican political boss, today was granted a divorce from Stanley L. Stevens of Hartford, Conn by Judge Joseph R. McCoole in Norfolk Probate Court, Dedham.

Mrs. Stevens declared that on one occasion her husband floored her with a right to the chin as she opened the door to greet him.

At a New Year's party in the home of friends, she said he became so abusive their hosts were forced to call a cab and send them away. On the way home, he struck her so often the cab driver threatened to take him to a police station unless he stopped, she testified.

And once at a bridge party she went on, he picked up the cards and threw them in her face, the while threatening to break her neck.

WIDOW TO SUE FOR 'WAGES'

Suit for wages as the housekeeper of Charles Franklin, former stage hypnotist and ventriloquist over a period of 22 years, is being planned by Mrs. Mabel B. Franklin, 42, of Forest st., Melrose, who was his third wife.

Her claims to his estate have been upset in Middlesex Probate Court in favor of Widow No. 1, who is Mrs. Nellie W. Crandall of Hardwick, Vt. She therefore plans the suit.

While members of his three families are engaged in the contrversy over his estate, Franklin's son, Charles, Jr., whose mother was his father's second wife, has advanced the claim his father committed suicide and had not died of natural causes. The elder Franklin's death certificate listed pneumonia as the cause of death.

Patria First Baby on July 4th

Boston's first Fourth of July baby of 1933 will probably be christened Patria, the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Costigan, of Princeton st., East Boston, said today.

The child was born at exactly one minute past midnight yesterday. She weighs 10 pounds and both she and her mother were reported doing nicely.

Firebug Is Blamed for Needham Blaze

Needham police today were in search of a firebug, blamed for fire in the barn owned by Mrs. Marjorie B. Forbes in Charles River st., and used as a storage place for the Walker-Gordon laboratories. Gordon Palmer, 22, Needham call fireman, was overcome by smoke while fighting the blaze.

MONTGOMERY ACTS PLAYBOY

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1933, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, July 5—You cannot blame Columbia for feeling a little bit pleased with themselves. They were able to persuade Louis B. Mayer to loan them Robert Montgomery, one of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's best known young leading men. The loan was arranged through Frank Capra, who was on the M-G-M lot not so very long ago and is slated to direct "Hello Big Boy," which will star Montgomery.

Capra could only see one person in this role of a society playboy who is penniless, but who gets by on acount of his personality. It's the same type of role Montgomery played opposite Norma Shearer when he first won fame for himself on the screen.

Jack La Rue has never been on a horse in his life and says he has never wanted to ride. Maybe that is why Paramount thinks his education is incomplete and has put him into a role as a western bad man in a typical Zane Grey number, "To the Last Man." La Rue will be cast with Randolph Scott and Kathleen Burke, both as much at home on a horse as they are on the ground. Well, all I can say is Mr. La Rue ought to be getting special padding for his breeches or he will be eating his meals off the mantel.

Cupid Busy

Chaplin's Next Ready

Charlie Chaplin's exclusiveness and his refusal to make any statements has been more than a dislike of publicity. Charlie has been working. His next picture is completely finished and it will be silent, save for sound effects such as songs and extraneous noises. At one time we were among those who insisted that Charlie, as the greatest pantomimist in the world, could make silent pictures and make them successfully. Now we wonder if the public, used to the talkies, will accept even Chaplin in a speechless comedy.

Chatter in Hollywood

One of Hollywood's most eligible and popular bachelors is headed straight for the altar. George O'Brien, who has been considered really girl shy, will marry pretty Marguerite Churchill before many months. This comes to us so straight that we are printing it as more than a rumor. These are two nice young people and deserve all the happiness that is in store for them. Miss Churchill had never shown any more than a passing interest in any other young man until George came along and paid her attention.

Work as Salvation

I can look to see Mary Pickford make a great picture this coming year. Work will be her salvation and she is already concentrating on an idea that may develop into something very big. The hardest story to write was the first definite information of her break with Douglas Fairbanks. Rumors had been printed, but the first exclusive and authorized article appeared in the Hearst newspapers. The natural feeling of elation over obtaining such a scoop was dimmed at the thought of Mary's suffering. Sympathy is universal for Mary, who has met her problem with a dignity that has made those who know her marvel at her courage.

Mary Brian was another of the screen favorites who added to the attractions at the air races. Mary was escorted by "Big Boy" Williams, the famous polo player. Later all the stars attended the ball given to the American and foreign fliers. (International News Photos.)

THE VOICE OF BROADWAY

By LOUIS SOBOL

Snapshots at Random!

Thursday night, at the Embassy, I encountered Zito, famous on two continents for his impertinent caricatures . . . A sad fellow tonight . . . Returning from Bermuda, it appears he had been detained and sent over to Ellis Island, where the authorities have decided that he can no longer remain in the United States, but must return to Paree and stay there until he can come in with the quota . . . "I like this countree so much," he wails. "I feel sad they make me to go. Maybe I won't be back for t'ree, four years" . . . I feel a little sad myself over Zito's sadness and hie over to the Waldorf Roof, where Al Goodman is feting Jack Pearl on the eve of his departure for the Coast . . .

At the Tavern, Wednesday Al Christie, Monte Brice, A. J. Kobler and myself sit around and discuss newspapers and features and the value of individual writing stars as compared to distinctiveness in news presentations. This is big night . . . Joe Rivkin drops over at our table with Dave Marx to remark, "Did you ever see Fatty looking better in your life?" . . . Later that evening to the opening of Jack Osterman's club, where Sammy White approaches me and murmurs, "It isn't that I feel so very sad, only I've been so used to going everywhere with Eva (Puck) that I feel lost because I got out of the habit of going out with friends, and it's hard to pick up again." George Burns leaves Gracie Allen's side to come over to Jack Pearl's table . . . Bert Wheeler yields to Osterman's cajolery and delivers his squeaky-voiced "Mousey" routine, followed by Harold Arlen's own piano conception of his biggest hit, "Stormy Weather" . . . So Osterman, at least, has his own night club and Broadway waits to see what he'll do with it.

Saturday night, somewhat lonely, I wander into the Park Avenue, where for some reason or other, the genial George Le Maze is in a particularly solicitous mood and insists upon arranging my dinner after his own fashion, which he does and I find myself confronted with rare, but palatable dishes, which feed the hunger in me and mellow me out of my sunken mood, so that I listen attentively to Charley Adler and Jimmy Kelly, of the Yacht Club Boys, and giggle at stories they tell me—three of which need attention from the barber, but one of which is highly amusing and I must remember to use it . . . Later I run into Al Jolson, gayer than I've ever seen him . . . "Going back—yessah, going back to ol' Californeay, Monday," he chirps, "And did all right on the races, today." . . . He tells me that on the occasion of his last series of broadcasts he had in a generous fit promised an impecunious relative that as long as he was on the air he would send him $150 weekly . . . When he became dissatisfied with his broadcasts and decided to quit, he journeyed out to the Coast and the first one to meet him was the relative . . . "How you feeling, Al?" he asked . . . "Not so good," moaned the singer, "I quit" . . . "You mean you ain't gonna broadcast no more?" "Yes, I just decided I'm going to take a long rest" . . . "Good God awmighty!" stormed the pensioner, "You quit now—just when I'm beginning to go good!"

Tuesday night finds us at the Richman Club, where girls of all types of beauty and all shades of color get into your hair...Girls in the band, girl entertainers, girl waitresses and headwaitresses, hostesses and dancing companions.

Well Balanced Screen Bill

Truth and fiction are neatly balanced on the current Fine Arts program. The new feature is "Cougar," an exciting film of American wild animals, while the secondary film is "Latin Love," starring Sari Maritza.

"Cougar" is the graphic screen account of the adventures of Jay C. Bruce, who appears in person on the Fine Arts stage as part of the show. In the film he is seen in action, and when the thrills are over, one is willing and eager to crown the most daring of all big game hunters. For Bruce not only uses a gun, but tackles the big "cats" with bare hands.

The film is finely edited and the photography is superb. Bruce is pictured also capturing rattlesnakes with a forked stick, and the panorama also presents bears, coyotes and other animals of the West.

Lovers of adventure in nature will find the movie absorbingly interesting from first to last. It smacks genuine always.

New Program

"Midnight Mary," powerful crook drama, brings a strong cast headed by Loretta Young, Ricardo Cortez, Franchot Tone, Andy Devine and Una Merkel at Loew's Orpheum Friday.

The new vaudeville bill will be headed by the Three Samuel Bros., dancing stars, in "Dance-Acrocy," with Rita Hayes and Kay Warner, Art Frank, the rural comedian, with Vivian Peterson in "Old Man Whoopee Himself"; Vincent O'Donnell, "The Miniature McCormacks"; Walter Walters, "The Cowboy Ventriloquist"; Sammy Liner and Salvy Cavicchio, Boston favorite, and Gruber's "Oddities of the Jungle."

REVUE STARS MAKE SCOLLAY STAGE HUM

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Edward G. Robinson on screen and the Harlem "Hot Chocolates" on stage give the Scollay the perfect combination for a holiday week show. The photoplay is "The Little Giant," wherein the able actor turns his talents entirely to comic effect. The footlight fare has all the elements of a tip top Negro attraction, which means that it is aces with the audience. Incidentally, it should be added, as a prosperity note, that the house is started out on its biggest week, in point of capacity attendance, since midwinter.

* * *

The all-colored troupe is announced as the same that has made things hum on the floor of the Connie's Inn night club. Whether or no, this "Revue in Black" has every angle of the jazzy entertainment idea; singing, dancing, and hilarious comedy. For band Baron Lee is on hand with the San Domingo hotcha orchestra, playing all the "hot" tunes imaginable, old and new.

Edward G. Robinson

Their playing is woven among the appearances of a couple of dozen or more stars, of whom one of the finest is Peg-leg Bates. If we have chronicled the past 12 months correctly, this is his fifth appearance locally; and the acclaim this time equals the tremendous reception given him every other time.

Aida Ward is the stellar blues singer; the Lucky Seven Trio does intricate and expert dancing. Joyner and Joyner patter along most entertainingly. Baby Cox, Mrs. Louis Armstrong, Avon Long, Kent Bros., and Gans and Perkins are a few of the other highlights of the bill.

"Little Giant" finds Robinson racketeering again, but not in the serious vein of "Little Caesar"; currently, he steps into the social whirl, falls for the ladies and stirs up vast mirth in his whirlwind career. Mary Astor and Helen Vinson are the principal females in the picture.

'Moonshine and Honeysuckle' Stellar Fare for Radio Fans

As a play, "Moonshine and Honeysuckle" at the Hollis, is a rather mild epilogue to the dramatic season of 1932-'33, already written upon the records as having a glorious climax in "Dinner at Eight" and an inglorious finish with the absurd "Not a Saint." As entertainment for radio fans, listening during several years to the "air serial" of the same title, the belated play is stellar stuff. Its best point is its delightful humor, even when it generally burlesques the lives of the Hill-Billy folk.

If a newspaper sojourn among these mountain people be ground for speaking with authority, and upon one occasion being fired at when this honest-to-goodness reporter was mistaken for a government agent after "moonshiners," then we may cheerfully accord the Hollis company high praise. For the characters are pretty nicely drawn, and dialect and acting give a fairly faithful picture of the dwellers in the "hollows." One easily forbears with the twist to get the laughs; that is showmanship, serving its purpose well in the broadcasting studio, and saving the day here in a playhouse. The merry passages are the best portions of the two-hour course of what the printed program calls "episodes."

In anything about the Hill-Billies, there has to be a feud. In the play two clans become embittered when one bartered into the other's larders, a sack of meal containing horsehairs. They bang away at one another, so that once the shooting (off stage) sounds like Fourth of July firecrackers; but there do not seem to be any casualties. The worst that happens is that the hatreds snarl the skein of love. But everything ends happily, with reunion both of the warring clans and the fondly attuned hearts.

The pace is easy, quite given to talk, and too little action. For buskin results, one would like to see the drama(?) turned into ripsnorting melodrama of the old school. A highlight

The Cast

But, even if dramatically weak, "Moonshine and Honeysuckle" has its place in the histrionic sun. It is never very dull, and it is sometimes very, very amusing. As when the country justice of the peace holds court in soapbox fashion.

The cast, in general, is just what you would expect of radio stars brought out for footlight array. But for their forthright handling of the assorted roles we honor them, and honestly say, we like them . . . H. S.

Fair Favorite to Visit Boston

Vatican Scene in Newsreel

The most magnificient religious spectacle seen in Rome in the last three years is contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, now at Loew's Orpheum. It shows Pope Pius borne aloft in St. Peter's Square before a throng of hundreds of thousands of worshippers celebrating the Feast of Corpus Domini. Carrying a gold and gem encrusted receptacle holding the Host, the Pope is borne around the square while the bells of St. Peter's ring out and the multitudes cheer. The Globe Trotter gives a graphic description of this greatest of all church spectacles.

Mrs. Roosevelt is seen joining the President on the Amberjack II in the pretty harbor of Mount Desert Island, Maine. The First Lady goes aboard the tiny schooner and gives the President a resounding kiss. Later the President is joined by his sons, John and Franklin Jr. who, with his other son, James, complete the members of the crew. Then the Amberjack puts off to sea.

First pictures of the Prince of the Austrias and his bride, Senorita Sanpedro Ocejo, the pretty Cuban girl for whom he gave up his rights to the Spanish throne, come from Lausanne, Switzerland where they are spending their honeymoon. Both tell of their great happiness and greet America through Hearst Metrotone News.

'Ann Carver's Profession' on Screen at Uptown

The Uptown today presents another of its unusual bills. Fay Wray and Gene Raymond are costarred in "Anna Carver's Profession." The story deals with marital difficulties which result when a woman lawyer attains financial independence while her husband plods along in a poorly paid position as an apprentice architect. The co-feature is "Tomorrow at Seven" featuring Chester Morris and Vivienne Osborn. This bill is rounded out with interesting short subjects.

BY AUSTEN LAKE

A hump-backed and pebbly peninsula is Bass Rocks, Nahant, which sits high above the water and holds a cluster of frame buildings on its spine. There is a factory-like hotel, painted egg-yolk yellow which sprawls across the highway as though it had been [illegible]

At the extreme end of the point is a low and naked looking shed which squats on stilts above the rocks and is freckled with little sun blisters and blobs of resin. Across its face a canvas banner reads "Mickey Walker's training camp" and inside there is a smooth floor where the lads and lasses of the neighborhood used to woo each other on roller skates. Streamers of faded bunting and a few shredded paper lanterns hang from the rafters

But plump Mickey with his amiable gargoyle face, is done with the shed, its equipment and the goggling yokels who came to pay two-bits to watch his leisurely schooling antics, and, except for a few brisk rubbers of bridge and a last scamper over the country side, is ready to keep his business appointment with Lou Brouillard tomorrow night at the Boston Garden.

It is plain that for him Bass Rocks, Brouillard and the Garden, is merely a whistle stop in his progress toward the more important terminal of his September match with Maxie Rosenbloom. For this is an opportunity to sharpen his reflexes and snatch up a fistful of spending money, even if the thin-faced, neatly tailored 'Doc' Kearns is counselling concentration

("Brouillard? Sure, a pretty tough boy . . . Lessee. Did I lead my ace from dummy")

Kearns sits in a corner of the egg-yolk hotel's beverage room, the common-room for his fighter and back-slapping friends. He confers in undertones with a sallow-faced man who has his index finger against the middle button of Kearn's sport jacket

"That's O. K. by me, unless this other thing goes over" . . . "Uh-huh . . . only he's gotta put it in ink.")

When Kearns Performed an Act of Rare Mercy

A thin, white scar runs up from the left corner of Mickey's pie-slit of a mouth, more intensified as he screws up his puggy features over his cards. That is a relic of his last major fight when Max Schmeling closed both his deepset blue eyes and then hammered his face into a pulpy mass that had no beginning or end so that it was a series of swollen bumps and crimson smears. On that October night, while 40,000 people stood and gasped in amazement at the fortitude of the little gamecock, Mickey had rocked on his thick legs and flailed blindly at his unseen foe, the cut in his mouth giving him a ghastly and mirthless grin, until Kearns signaled defeat from ring side and leaped onto the platform to steer his fighter away.

And even then, though the rubber mouthpiece was knocked loose and he was staggering with exhaustion, Mickey had blustered and waved his arms so that a smear of his blood had daubed Kearn's silk shirt front. They had swabbed his face with a rubber sponge and Kearns had growled something that sounded like, "You gotta fight again sometime, ain't you?"

There were many at ringside that night who wagged their heads and sagely predicted that this was the back trail for Mickey; that his star had set as a headline fighter, and that from this time onward he would gradually retire to the limbo where hulks of the boxing business were stored. Perhaps Kearns, keen judge of fighting flesh, may have thought the same. For, since then, he has nursed Walker's strength and lain low, limiting him only to a couple of conditioning fights against milltown hacks in the Middle West.

Tomorrow night he is stepping into Brouillard, in what Kearns nervously expects to be a final testing match before shooting at Rosenbloom's title and the big money. By carefully manipulating Kearns thinks he can squeeze out a few more golden eggs before his goose is ready for the roaster.

Shrewd Brains Plus Knockout Wallop Makes Money

And oddly blended partnership is this, between the amiable human bulldog who takes and gives the flogging, and the human fox, who supplies the brains. Both men have made and spent a million, each in his own way. Kearns in depreciated investments and dormant real estate, Walker in misplaced trusts, alimony and divers law suits. But the two stand as romantics of the ring in a day when the boxing business has resolved into a sordid trade in which mediocre men give as little for as much as they are able. Mickey is a holdover from the Benny Leonard, Harry Greb and Jack Dempsey era of the prize ring, when fighters gave a dollar value and held an unholy pride in their workmanship.

I am thinking now of the evening in 1925 when Greb and Walker punched each other into a fog before a half million-dollar house at the Yankee Staduim, Greb taking the decision on points after fifteen rounds. Later in the night both fighters retired to the Silver Slipper at the corner of Forty-seventh and Broadway, there to sooth their outside bruises with inside libations of brown ale. Past midnight and into the early morning hours they sat, while the table became a forest of empties. Not until then did either one make any mention of the evening's fight, and then only when Greb mentioned the size of the crowd.

"Yeah," announced Mickey, "and if you hadn't stuck your thumb in my eye in the 14th, I'd a flattned you."

Both glared at each other from blackened eyes, by common consent accepting the unspoken challenge. In the street they took off their coats and squared away, exchanging badly aimed wallops under a street light. A crowd began to gather, when suddenly a cop hove up and separated the two, hooting them into separate taxies and ordering them off in different directions.

"Can you beat it," marvelled Mickey, "today, in his gurgling, liquid laugh. "We fight before half a million gross, and then do it all over again for nothing."

Tomorrow night Brouillard, who has nothing to lose by way of reputation, may land on Mickey's button nose. He may often, since the plump gamecock is sometimes careless about his personal safety and estimates one of his punches at par value for three of his opponent's. Only Lou had better not lay any of his fast pitches in Mickey's groove, unless he wants to be knocked into the centerfield bleachers. It is unlikely that the little man who has been accustomed to fight the leading heavyweights on even terms and who was once matched to meet Primo Carnera, until the New York Commission cancelled the bout, will dip his colors to a man of his own weight and class.

Ace Tests Boston Evening American's Hole-in-One Tourney Layout

Morrison Praises Ace Test

BY BILL GRIMES

"Say, that is some one shotter," declared Alex Morrison, one of the country's best golf authorities and shotmakers, after playing a dozen balls, one of which was two feet short of the pin, to the BOSTON EVENING AMERICANS hole at Franklin Park.

"If it is possible, I will arrange to stay over and try my luck at cunning an ace in the American's Hole-In-One tournament next Monday. My congratulations to Supt. Joe Howe for laying out such a fine hole. I predict now that some golfer will hole out during the coming tourney.

"I went to the Charles River Country Club the other day, with Tom Robertson, your managing editor, and when I departed from that course, I was wearing another wound stripe. I was attempting to get Mr. Robertson to hit through the ball and he must have misunderstood me, for his shot thumped me on the shin.

"In staging Hole-In-One tournaments, the Boston Evening American is developing interest in golf

"If any player or players hole out this season, I wish that you would have them describe just what they did to accomplish their feats and forward me their report.

"I will be one of the early starters, if I can arrange to stay over."

Alex, whose main golf philosophy consists in "keeping the chin back," insists there will be some aces made, if the contestants will remember this slogan. He is showing his tricks this week at the RKO Orpheum.

Morrison, an expert, will try to see at Franklin Park. Yet any duffer has just as good a chance to win one of the valuable prizes offered.

Since golf was introduced in this country, Brookline has produced more nationally and internationally known Knights of the Niblick than any one community and they all received their schooling while caddying.

The Town of Brookline will open its public golf course tomorrow. It is one of the most picturesque public layouts in this country. I predict that Brookline will produce more champions in the future than it did in the past

"Munic" Aids Youths

Now that Brookline youngsters have an opportunity to play regularly, they will take their places among the top flight golfers. Many Brookline youngsters who might have been prominent in golf have had little opportunity to practice. Now that there is a public course available watch for a noticeable increase in golf stars from the Wealthy Town.

TAP'S TIPS

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

Henri DeGlane has been making so much conversation about desiring a return wrestling match with Ed Don George, world's champion, that Paul Bowser has called for a showdown.

"I have received several thousand letters from wrestling fans since the recent title bout between Ed Don George and Henri DeGlane," said Bowser. "Many of them were written by Frenchmen. The letter writers charge DeGlane was robbed by Referee Charley Donnell. They claim that when a spectator tossed a towel into the ring the referee should have halted the contest until both wrestlers had been informed as to what actually happened.

Mr Boston

"I have asked DeGlane and George to send representatives to see me. I believe the public desires a return bout between DeGlane and George. Henri has already informed me he is eager to engage in such a contest. In the past George has displayed a willingness to meet all comers and I do not believe he will adopt any sidestepping tactics now."

DeGlane Had the Edge

I thought DeGlane had a decided edge when his recent bout with George ended in a weird mixup. Before the towel was tossed into the ring DeGlane had George in poor condition from the effects of a hammerlock and toe hold. It was impossible for George to break those holds. Henri released the holds when he saw the towel thrown into the ring

If Bowser is successful in signing George and DeGlane for a return match, he should bar towel throwin. The referee, with the verbal consent of a wrestler's chief second, should be the only person allowed to end a match. In New York, the wrestling solons do not recognize a towel thrown from a corner. The referee is the only person who is permitted to say whether a man is unable to continue. I have always felt that a chief second should also have some authority in this matter. He knows the physical condition of the man he is seconding better than anybody else. He should at least be consulted by the referee before a bout is halted.

Sharkey's Story of K. O.

I talked with Jack Sharkey in regard to the final punches in the sixth round of his bout with Primo Carnera

"The pictures show that I was dropped by a right hand uppercut followed by a left hand punch to the jaw," said the former champion. "Just before these blows landed Carnera counted with left and right hand punches to the body.

"I do not remember being hit by these last four punches. I received the kayo smash earlier while moving along the ropes in the direction of my own corner. I had got up after a slip, and was backing away when Carnera hit me with a straight left hand punch. Everything went blank after that smash. They tell me I continued to fight back hard, but it was purely from instinct. I didn't know what I was doing. I have not any recollection of the final wallops."

May Battle Levinsky

Sharkey's next bout may be with King Levinsky in Chicago in September. Jack has definitely decided to remain in the ring, and believes he will be able to fight his way to the top again. The former champion has been offered a guarantee of $25,000 with a 40 per cent privilege to clash with Levinsky. The Chicago promoters believe that a Sharkey-Levinsky bout will draw $100,000

Much at Stake in Bout

Mickey Walker and Lou Brouillard will have much at stake when they tangle up in their ten-round bout at the Boston Garden tomorrow night. Walker has been signed to battle for Maxie Rosenbloom's world's light heavyweight championship in New York, while Brouillard is going to clash with Ben Jeby, recognized as middleweight champion in New York, at the Yankee Stadium. The boxer who loses tomorrow night will have his drawing power greatly reduced. I look for a rugged punching battle when Mickey and Brouillard start trading blows. The bout is a natural

Diamond Dust

By JOE CASHMAN

If the July 4 pacesetters are going to carry on to the championships this year, as they have so often in the past, the world's series contenders will be the Senators and Giants.

Terrymen Lead

The Terrymen were tripped twice on the holiday by our Braves but they still lead the National League parade by five full games. More than half of the defeats suffered by the New Yorkers this season have been administered by the Braves and Cardinals. The Tribemen have taken seven out of 11 and the Redbirds have grabbed seven out of 10 decisions from the leaders, who have lost but 27 times in all.

Coming from behind in each game, the last-place Phillies took both ends of a double-header from the Dodgers, 6 to 3 and 4 to 2. "Chuck" Klein hit his 17th homer, to go into a third-place tie with Gehrig, in the first game.

Walter Johnson's Indians hung onto fourth place in the American League by splitting with the fifth-place White Sox. The Nats won 5-2, then lost a 6-3 decision.

The Cardinals gained a game on the Giants by splitting with the Pirates. Bill Hallahan held the Bucs to five hits to capture the morning game, 5 to 1. Larry French southpawed the Redbirds into submission in the p. m., 4 to 2

Cubs, Reds Split

The Cubs and Reds also split. Guy Bush blanked the Cinci clan, 5 to 0, in the first game. "Chick" Hafey hit a home run and drove in four tallies as the Reds won the nightcap, 8 to 1

LAST RITES FOR THOMAS DOWD

Holyoke Mass. July 5 (AP)—The funeral of Thomas J. Dowd, former major league luminary who reached his zenith some five years ago, took place yesterday in this city, his native city. The body of Dowd, who had fallen upon unfortunate days, was found in the Connecticut river last Sunday.

Dowd began his baseball career while a student at Brown University. He went to Washington Nationals with whom he played a year. Going thence to St. Louis Nationals with whom he played sensational ball for six years. Then after a year with the Baltimore Nationals he went to the Boston Red Sox and Cleveland team of the American League.

Alonso Beats Buxby

Glen Cove, N. Y., July 5 (AP)—Manuel Alonso won the Nassau Country Club's invitation tennis tournament, defeating Martin Buxby 6—2, 2—6, 6—3, 3—6, 6—4, in the final round.

IOLLAN STARTS IN FEATURE RACE TODAY

By SAM COHEN

Rockingham park, Salem, N. H., July 5—With one of the largest racing throngs of the season in holiday attendance here, more than 30,000 individuals, owner Lou Smith started preparations today for a second meeting here that will rival that of any track in the country.

"You can lay it on the line now that before the second meeting is terminated Rockingham Park will have a stake race that will get national prominence," said Smith to us.

This means that the leading throughbreds of the world will be pointing to the fall meeting here, which will officially be announced next Monday. That means that turf followers from the four corners of the United States will be here.

HANDLE HITS $288,512

A total of $288,512 was handled in the pari-mutuel machines during the holiday program. The hand's grand total is within hailing distance of $2,000,000 now.

Racing ran more true to form than ever before this season here, yet there were enough upsets to give the many short enders something to cheer about.

With the holiday racing now out of the way, the next big feature of the week will be the $1000 Boston Evening American handicap that will bring out the ten best three-year olds and upward stabled at the track. Sheldon H. Fairbanks Gold Step, which has yet to race, here, may start in the Boston Evening American classic.

The feature today will be the Club Members $800 claiming race for three-year olds and up over a distance of a mile and a sixteenth.

IOLLAN DARK HORSE

Iollan will go to the post the dark horse in this race, though she won many races at the Eastern Horse Club meetings at The Country Club, Brookline, the past few years.

Any attempt to hold back horses in races here are being squashed by the officials, which sent out a real warning yesterday by setting down Jockey Joe O'Malley for 10 days.

The officials were convinced there was something wrong in previous races O'Malley rode on Prometheus, when he brought the horse home with little trouble against a strong field yesterday.

EASTERN FLEET RACE ACROSS BAY DELAYED

SKIPPERS LEAVE MARBLEHEAD TOMORROW

By ED SCHRIFTGIESSER

Storm-bound by the ... northeaster which was sweeping the coast, the racing fleet of the Eastern Yacht Club remained at anchor today safe ... the harbor at Marblehead. The scheduled racing run from Marblehead across Massachusetts Bay to Provincetown, first of a series of four of the club's annual cruises, was definitely postponed until ... and seas moderated.

If the weather is more favorable tomorrow the fleet, under command of Commodore William T. Aldrich, will probably make the run to the Cape Cod haven ... the day of racing ... off the tip of the Cape.

Traditionally the Eastern Yacht Club draws bad weather for its cruises. Two years ago one of the worst spells of fog in years held the fleet at anchor for five days at North Haven, Me. But in spite of the cold northeast wind and the heavy ... swell which rolled in past ... Point yesterday, 20 ... craft competed in the club's annual regatta.

ROBIN'S THIRD WIN

The famous Puritan Cup, which has been raced for each summer by Eastern yachts for 47 years, was won for the third time by the Class Q sloop Robin, owned by Chandler Hovey of Boston, vice commodore of the E. Y. C. This sloop, when owned by Isaac R. Edmands and ... the Nern, captured the famous trophy in 1928 and 1929 and now becomes the second yacht in history to become a three-time winner.

The lofty cup yachts, Vanitie and Weetamoe, led the fleet over the 24-mile course, but were unable to match the Robin after the handicaps had been figured out. In the schooner class the sleek Joan II, owned by F. Haven Clark, had little competition in winning the Cleopatra's Barge Cup.

MOHAWK SHOWS CLASS

Holiday honors for numbers went to the South Boston Yacht Club, which had 82 competing off City Point. The race of the day was that of the Indian Class in which Charlie Mehegan's Mohawk, with Billy Pisterino at the tiller, slipped past Walter Hallett's Ace for a 24-second win. ... this broke the tie with Billy Wells' Peggy in the season race for the golden spinnaker prize.

Henigan Captures 15-Mile Road Race

The Harvard eight that never took the backwash of a Yale crew trots out its mammoth shell for a preliminary workout at Long Beach, Cal., preparing to show western crews the fine art of rowing in the national intercollegiate crew races, July 7 and 8. Gerry Cassedy's crimson sweepswingers had a lot of train kinks to remove after their 3000-mile ride across the country, but they will be in perfect shape by race time. Are you ready, Harvard? Then row!

Ex-Pale Hose Leader Held for Observation

Chicago, July 5 (INS)—James Callahan, wealthy contractor and banker and one-time manager of the Chicago White Sox, was under observation in a hospital today, after battling a police squad, and virtually demolishing the interior of his palatial home.

Callahan threatened to kill policemen who attempted to enter his home after being summoned by neighbors who saw the former baseball star smashing windows, furniture, and hacking woodwork and walls with an ax, apparently in an insane rage. He was quelled by tear gas ... Callahan managed the White Sox from 1903 to 1905 and again from 1911 to 1913.

Primo Tells Own Story in Boston American

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Tomorrow, in the Boston Evening American, Primo Carnera himself figuratively will take the pen in his huge hand and begin a series in which the world's heavyweight champion will tell the readers intimate stories of his own life from the cradle to the winning of the championship of the universe.

With Carnera writing his own autobiography under his own signature, nothing is left for this humble scribe but to close this series by touching ... things Primo either in his own telling is somewhat ambiguous on or ignores.

JOURNEE FINDS PRIMO

So, first, his discoverer, P. Journee.

Journee, the big, blonde former French heavyweight champion who lost the title to Georges Carpentier and then became a sparring partner of the man who was in the opposite corner to Jack Dempsey in The Battle of The Century, first saw Carnera plodding along in the dust of a road leading from Bordeaux to Paris.

The circus with which Carnera had been employed as a Strong Man had broken up and giant young Primo was out of a job. Journee saw in the giant young Italian with his huge billowing chest, great arms and hands like twin hams a rare fistic prospect.

Journeee himself was in slim financial stratis. He needed money and influence to rightly develop and exploit Carnera.

So Journee went to Leon See, who, despite his small size, was a former Strong Man, but was then sporting editor of a Parisian newspaper and a leading promoter.

In the meantime, Carnera had emerged from fistic obscurity. He had knocked out among others Salvatore Ruggirello, Mose Boquillon, Jack Hubeck and Jack Stanley. The Stanley victory was in London and paved the way for a match there with Young Stribling.

Walter Friedman, otherwise known as "Good Time Charlie," a representative of Billy Duffy and Ownie Madden, was at the ringside in London. Friedman saw in Carnera a future great. Carnera was rematched with Stribling in Paris. Friedman hurried to Paris to try to make connections with See.

One night Friedman, See, Jeff Dickinson, the promoter, and William "Sparrow" Robertson met in Luigi's all night cabaret and gaming place on the Rue Edward VII, just off the Boulevard des Capucines.

DUFFY, FRIEDMAN IN

At the end of the conference Friedman and his boss, Billy Duffy, were declared in on Carnera and plans made for an American invasion and tour under Duffy's auspices.

Just as Paul Journee was eased out of the Carnera entourage by Leon See so, after a year in America, See found himself in the position which necessitated him relinquishing the managership of Carnera and turning the full reins over to Billy Duffy.

To be sure, Carenar has a business manager, Louis Soresi, a retired banker. But Soresi's main duties, it is understood, are the untangling of Carnera's somewhat complicated financial affairs.

GAME OF CENTURY AIRING

Baseball Classic Being Broadcast

By N. F. T.

That grand old mid-summer "Play Ball" pronouncement is going to ring into NBC and CBS microphones tomorrow afternoon at Chicago, to proclaim what sport statisticians say, should prove the most colorful baseball game ever anticipated. Two teams made up of top-notch horsehide heavers from American and National League nines, will come together as a special World's Fair attraction. Indeed it's a "Game of the Century" and a treat par excellence for the the glorious pastime enthusiasts who are fortunate enough to be holding down grand stand or bleacher seats.

* * *

Broadcasting facilities are arranged to carry the classic over coast to coast air waves. Hub stations WEEI and WNAC are slated as the New England outlets beginning promptly at 2 o'clock. Two observing talkers, named Pat Flannagan and Hal Totten, staff men for the NBC and CBS circuits respectively, incidentally argued over aplenty out around the Windy City as to their comparative "mike" personalities, have been chosen to sit in and call the gala game in detail as they see it.

* * *

DIAMOND DEMONS

Sure enough, Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Jimmy Dykes, Al Simmons and their calibre have the proud American League laurels to uphold. Messrs. Hartnett, Frisch, Terry, Traynor and other high-type National League team talent shall strive not only to stand off the former, but likewise bring home the well-known bacon with their bats. At this writing, it looks as though Warnecke and Hubbell will pitch for the NL club, opposed by "Lefty" Grove and the other star AL southpaw slinger named "Lefty" Gomez.

* * *

* * *

WARING HAS WITNESSES

Fred Waring and his playing "Pennsylvanians" as announced by David Ross and featuring "Mandy Lou" comedy, start broadcasting from Carnegie Hall in New York this evening, with 3000 or more looking on. Eighty network stations of the country now transmit this weekly half hour (WNAC) heard hereabouts between 10 and 10.30 each Wednesday night.

* * *

Tonight's "Stage Show of the Air" offering, as put on locally for WEEI earcuppers (8.30), looks like a smart studio ... Dave Apollon brings his musical funmakers from the Metropolitan Theater stage. Dave has a gal named Nora Williams in the group who sounds strikingly as does Kate Smith when she sings. In fact Nora is also very nearly as sizeably impressive all around as Kate Smith, but not a pound lacks personality.

SIXTY-MINUTE SHOW

Ray Perkins is named as the chipper chap who brings a full hour studio revue out for a first time turn tomorrow night (WEEI) in that former "Baron Munchausen" spot. Ray has a sort of "hash" offering in store, with tenor, soprano and baritone solos, popular and semi-classic orchestra music. He includes a goodly sprinkling of his own original humor throughout. If memory serves the 'colyum' correctly, young Mr. Perkins did practically this same thing about this time last summer when things slowed up commercially and he scored consistently with it.

* * *

Again those iron men, "Amos 'n' Andy," plan to go through the summer broadcasting nightly (WBZ) without a vacation, the third year in succession they have done so.

BUSINESS INDEX SHOWS GAINS EXTENDED

By FRANK H. MELOON

The Economist's weekly business index, just made public, shows gains of the previous week extended. The index pointers include automobile production, bituminous coal production, construction contracts, cotton consumption, electric power output, merchandise and commodity car loadings and steel production. Crude oil production alone was below the previous week's total. For some of these lines the upward trend is distinctly contra seasonal although somewhat reminiscent of previous recoveries from severe depressions.

In a special article June 14, 1921, we pointed out that solving the railroad problem was one of the major needs of the day and that transportation must flow freely if good times were to be with us. The selection of Joseph B. Eastman, Boston's representative on the Interstate Commerce Commissioner, to act as "coordinator" in solving the railroad problems, indicates how completely the new Administration is in line with the idea so long ago advanced here. And good carrier shares are selling around their highs for the year in anticipation of the wise action to be taken.

A ten per cent increase in wages, effective tomorrow, was announced today by the W. F. Whitney Company, manufacturers of maple reproductions of early American furniture at South Ashburnham.

"Our plant is operating at full capacity. In the last month we have increased our force and, if we go on the five-day week, as seems probable, we shall make a further increase of 20 per cent in employment," says Treasurer J. P. Carney in a message to this column.

A graphic picture of the improvement in a basic American industry is given today in the report of R. L. Polk & Co. showing sales of new passenger automobiles in the United States in May totaled 160,243, an increase of 20 per cent over the 131,282 total in May, 1932, and 34.5 per cent greater than the 119,909 total in April this year. May was the first month since October 1929 in which sales exceeded those in the like month of the previous year.

Sales of new motor trucks in May totaled 20,925. The total was 11.9 per cent greater than the 18,696 in May, last year, and 20.9 per cent greater than the 17,301 in April this year.

Caution Seen as Keynote in State Street

State Street notes that the heading of prices into new high ground calls for a bit of caution by traders. Those who failed to get aboard last week had better wait for the temporary dip, which nearly always follows a successful thrust through a stubborn resistance level. On the other hand interests that accumulated equities last week are not inclined to disturb their holdings at this time since they vision better selling levels in the not too distant future.

SOVIET TRADE SEEN NEAR

The cotton deal with Soviet Russia leads many to believe that large scale buying by that country, of domestic goods and materials, is near at hand. As noted here a few days before news of the cotton loan the funds to facilitate the purchases will undoubtedly be advanced by Reconstruction loans.

The land of Sovietism is a rich field for a country able to advance money with which its prospective purchaser may procure the goods it needs. Our luck with foreign loans has not been particularly good, but there is every reason to feel that this borrower has had enough experience to desire a good name.

Case, Harvester, Allis Chalmers, General Electric and Caterpillar Tractor are a few of the likely beneficiaries of Russian trade . . . Not to speak of the producers of raw materials who will in turn start to spend their added income for finished goods earnestly desired for many months.

All told, it is said that Russia has a billion dollars' worth of orders to distribute . . . Why should we miss out on this opportunity to do business . . . One tremendously bullish factor is the army of sold out bulls that have been following prices higher.

The surprising jump in rail income which enabled the Pennsylvania to make a down payment on its R. F. C. loan is stirring up all sorts of stories . . . Why the gossips are even saying that the Nickel Plate will soon be in a position to pay a part of its loans.

But the roads that have no short term debt of any kind are the ones which contribute real acrobatic tape performances . . . The earnings leverage is terrific . . . Due, of course, to three years of economizing on this and that . . . Real earnings sixteen cents should soon appear. H. E. B.

BOSTON STOCKS MOSTLY LOWER

Moderately lower prices ruled in late trading on the Boston Stock Exchange today. Several stocks reached new highs for the year in the first period but the list displayed an easier tone later. American Telephone dropped slightly more than a point before stiffening in the final few minutes.

Losses of around a point were recorded for First National Stores, New Haven, Pacific Mills and United Fruit. American Woolen preferred slipped back fractionally after touching a new top for the year. Nash and Pennsylvania were likewise at new highs but the gains were lost later.

Boston & Maine prior preferred was strong, moving up 3 points. Boston & Albany recovered an early loss of a point. Atchison was down moderately. New River preferred, an inactive issue soared almost 14 points to a new high on its first appearance on the tape in months.

Kingsbury Brewery was fractionally lower. Eastern Gas & Fuel preferred advanced a point, while the prior preferred was down over a point. Edison Electric was off slightly. Merganthaler jumped almost 3 points and Gillette gained over a point.

BUSINESS GAIN VIEWS SEEN AS DIVIDED

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

New York, July 5—For the first time since prosperity faded out in 1929 there is general recognition that business volume has been increasing in recent weeks.

There is, however, some debate as to what is responsible for the betterment.

Partisans would say that obviously the new deal economic program is responsible for recovery.

Yet a substantial school of economic thought contends that business would have recuperated anyway.

This latter viewpoint is like that of the medical patient who thanks the Lord if he gets well and blames the doctor if he does not.

After reviewing six basic factors of recovery, Roger W. Babson, economic soothsayer of Wellesley Hills, Mass., in a series of articles expressed the view that the upturn was not dependent on stimulants.

"I feel," the statistician said, "that business would be recovering naturally by itself without the artificial stimulants which Washington is giving it. Just as the decline could not be stopped from 1929 to 1932, so the improvement could not be stopped today."

I cannot wholly concur in Mr. Babson's opinion that the recovery is 100 per cent automatic and inevitable.

I do believe, however, that the accession of President Roosevelt to power was fortunately timed at a phase when the raw materials for recovery were at hand.

Yet the administration's economic philosophy is the antithesis of automatism. Its view is that the economic situation can be managed.

If through wise leadership it makes proper use of dynamic shortages and bargain prices which it found on coming to power, management in the large will have much to be proud of.

Power Report Will Be Given Tomorrow

Live News of Leaders Today in Wall Street

OILS are widely viewed as in a good position to lead new market advances. Gasoline prices continue strong throughout the country, which reaffirms the belief that a price advance, which will carry crude oil quotations to 75 cents or better on the top grades, is not far distant. In some quarters it is believed that the advance will take place before the close of the current week.

American Can Is Talked for 125

A flock of bullish "pointers" are in circulation. Among these is one that says American Can will likely go to 125 on the move which would mean a rise of more than 30 points.

U. S. Leather to Report Out of Red

Report of the United States Leather Co. for quarter to June 30, which will be published toward the end of this month, is expected to show some profit on operations against losses shown previously. The company gave several indications of the turn for the better in the report for three months ended March 31. It has been indicated that the company is carrying its hide inventories slightly below 5 cents a pound, against an actual current market of 12 cents and better.

Some Market Tips Found Making Good

As is usual in a bull market, some tips are to be found making good in a big way. Baltimore & Ohio, for example, has been acting nicely since being mentioned in this column as the "most tipped rail." In the carrier group there has been some "long-pull" buying of Delaware & Hudson.

Railroads have been among the largest borrowers from the R. F. C., with loans from the corporation now outstanding in the neighborhood of $340,000,000. The Pennsylvania is the first of the large borrowers from the corporation to signify its intention of paying off its debt, incurred in connection with electrification of its main line between New York and Washington. The road will start repayment of the $27,500,000 it borrowed with a refund of $9,500,000.

New York Standard Is a Popular Oil

Standard Oil of New York is popular with traders, and has experienced some heavy buying in recent market sessions. The oils generally are today in the best Street favor in many months.

Rail Equipments Are in Favor

While railroad equipment stocks generally cannot be depended upon to show consistent earning power they have their innings in the business circle when they show large earnings. However, many of the companies in this field have maintained a strong financial position and can pass along to stockholders any profits which may develop in the next year. The equipment companies did little or no expanding in the 1926-1929 era and have added no extra burden of debts which would have to be cleared away before dividends could be considered.

Copper Industry Situation Better

The copper industry is beginning to emerge from the doldrums. The reduction in stocks of refined copper in the United States amounted to 50,000,000 pounds or more in June, which is about equivalent to the reduction which took place in all of 1932. In May stocks were reduced 40,000,000 pounds and in April 15,000,000 pounds. Domestic consumption of new copper is now 40,000 short tons a month, against 16,000 tons to 17,000 tons a month at the bottom of the depression in 1932. There has been an upward trend in copper consumption abroad but not as impressive as that which is taking place in this country.

BUSINESS SEEN AS CONTINUING UPWARD TREND

Standard Statistics Co. said today that a continuation of the upward business trend during the remainder of the year was probable.

"The usual mid-summer recession," it stated, "will be greatly moderated, or entirely eliminated in many lines because of accrued and belated buying. By the close of the year business volumes in most of the essential industries undoubtedly will compare favorably with levels witnessed in the early stages of depression."

The June improvement was one of the sharpest on record, said the summary, "an upturn that was especially significant inasmuch as in most industries activity seasonally recedes in June.

"Indications now point decisively to a broad scale industrial expansion during the last half of 1933. This prospect is conditioned primarily on the basis of a natural recovery after the several years of abnormally severe deflation.

"In addition, however, considerable promise adheres in the program contemplated under the industrial recovery and public works act to expand greatly the latent purchasing power to consumers. By this means the present formidable amount of unemployment should be reduced at a more rapid rate than would be possible along strictly normal lines."

Central's Loadings Set a New 1933 Top

New York Central's total loadings were 104,967 cars, a rise of 42 per cent over a year ago and a new 1933 high. For the week ended June June 24 the road's freight traffic amounted to 101,231 cars, an increase of 1.9 per cent over 1932.

'Frisco Loadings Up

The St. Louis-San Francisco handled 12,724 cars last week against 9920 in the same week of 1932.

Spectator Sees Business Rise as Continuing

When an American recovery movement really gets underway, it takes a lot to put it back into reverse, says Spectator. Nothing is immediately in sight ahead that should make for more than temporary setbacks. Bulls say that after every recession the market will rally, the only question being at just what point the rally will begin.

BILLIONS MADE BY RECOVERY

Corporations and individuals in the United States are between 35 and 40 billion dollars richer on paper than they were on that noonday of March 4 when Franklin Roosevelt was inducted into office and every bank and major exchange market in the nation was closed.

The recovery from the financial chaos of that day began on March 13th when all sound banks were reopened; when fear within the hearts of the citizens began to ebb, was succeeded by timid confidence, all of which finally developed into the boisterous enthusiasm and the radiant confidence that marked the final stock market hours of Monday.

While the enhancement value of securities dealt in on the New York Stock Exchange is estimated at 21 billion for stocks and 4 billion for bonds, the balance of the increased paper wealth, to make up the estimate of a recovery between 35 and 40 billions, is found in the enormous advances scored by stocks on the New York Curb, on the exchanges in the larger cities of the nation, in the cotton marts, grain pits, wool markets, etc.

As the stock and bond markets in New York and all the principal cities rebounded the cotton, grain and other commodity markets exhibited an equal buoyancy, swirling onward and upward to new highs.

St. Paul's Loadings Make 27.3 P.C. Gain

During week ended July 1 loadings on line of Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific were 27.3 per cent above the like 1932 week, contrasted with a rise of 25.5 per cent over a year ago in the preceding week.

FOREIGN GOLD STOCKS OFFER GOOD HEDGE

By LEWIS HANEY

Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, July 5—Since it appears that the dollar is not to be stabilized, and that the price lifting operation is to be continued "hedging" against a depreciation in the dollar is still in order. In what different ways may hedging be done?

(1) Probably the most direct way is to sell dollars short in foreign exchange. This can ordinarily be done through dealers in exchange. If one buys a pound sterling for $4.20 for example, and the dollar then falls so that the pound becomes worth $4.50, the transaction affords a 7 per cent depreciation in our currency.

(2) Another way is to get gold. This metal is the world's standard of value, and, as dollars are depreciated by the Washington policy, gold automatically becomes worth more dollars.

Some wealthy people have stored gold abroad. Most of us, however, cannot do this. But we may buy securities on the foreign bourses. Then we can sell them for gold secured currencies, and keep the funds in a foreign bank. This has been done to a great extent.

Much the same thing is accomplished by selling commodities abroad. Many exporters here have done this and left the proceeds of their sales in England or France.

Or we may buy the foreign dollar bonds of countries which still maintain gold payment. Many have bought United Kingdom 5½ per cent bonds and Canadian bonds for example, and these have gone up in terms of dollars.

(3) Foreign gold mine stocks offer a distinct hedge. There are free gold markets abroad. The gold from the mines in which the stock has an equity is sold at a premium over dollars, which rises as the dollar falls. The "brain trust" can not control the foreign mine, and one can deposit the dividends, as well as the proceeds of the sale of the stock, in a foreign bank.

(4) One of the more direct ways to hedge against dollar depreciation is to buy commodities on our exchanges—hides, wool, metals, cotton and wheat. Their prices are directly affected by the fall of the dollar. If the dollar continues to fall, they will rise, and if one sells out at the top one gets enough dollars to make up for the decline in the value of the dollar.

PRICE CHANGES FOR LEADERS RUN MIXED

New York, July 5—Price changes for leading issues on the New York Stock Exchange ran mixed through most of today's dealings. The financial Four of July celebration in rather subdued spirits attended by realizing in most departments.

While stocks and staples generally weathered the "cashing in" procedure with equanimity, there were some noticeable gaps at times in the price ranges of shares and grains.

NOT MUCH BUOYANCY

Copper and alcoholic equities, on the whole, gave the best performance, with several specialties stepping out of the plodding parade. There was little buoyancy, however, in any group.

Wheat, corn, oats and rye had their ups and downs, but showed a steadying tendency after some early relapses. The dollar slumped about 6 cents in terms of the British pound, although it rallied moderately after the first sinking spell.

National Distillers led the so-called "wet" division with an extreme advance of around 7 points before relaxing. U. S. Industrial Alcohol got up about 4, American Commercial Alcohol 2 and Owens-Illinois ½. Gains were shown by Anaconda, Kennecott, Cerro de Pasco and American Smelting.

TRADE GAINS SHOWN

Libby-Owens and Simmons were up around 1 to 2 and Chesapeake & Ohio and Baltimore & Ohio took on a point or so. Most of the rails were without their Monday's enthusiasm. Delaware & Hudson and Union Pacific yielded around 3 each, and Atchison, Lackawanna and New York Central sagged.

Allied Chemical dropped about 4 points, while U. S. Steel, Columbian Carbon, Celanese, American Telephone, Du Pont, Case, American Can, Westinghouse and a number of others were sold lower.

Except for a few isolated sections, marked gains in employment, payrolls, production and sales all over the country were reported to the New York Board of Trade in a survey it has been conducting, results of which were announced today.

With the administration's position on temporary monetary stabilization clearly defined, the financial community's interest in holiday developments at the world economic conference subsided.

Whether specific issues on the agenda can yet be salvaged for constructive action remains to be seen, but it is fairly certain that Wall Street's major question has been answered, at least for the present.

The holiday brought forth optimistic news in the domestic picture. Freight traffic in the third quarter this year will be about 10 per cent above the total of the same period last year, according to estimates prepared by the shippers' regional advisory boards. This is the first increase which has been forecast since the last quarter of 1929.

Cotton Lower With Early Rises Lost

New York, July 5—Cotton futures turned reactionary toward midday today after a short-lived display of strength at the opening. The market on the whole gave a disappointing performance in the face of Liverpool cables which were $2 a bale above due prices, figured on the sterling rate, opening up 2 to 17 points and then sagging under pressure of profit-taking and liquidation. Late prices were off 2 to 6 points with October off 4 at 10.57, December off 2 at 10.75 and March off 6 at 10.92

6 P.C. Pay Raise by U. S. Freight

United States Freight Co. has increased salaries of all employes 6 per cent. President F. N. Melius said June business was in excess of May and approximately 25 per cent ahead of June, 1932. May showed substantial improvement over preceding month. A careful review of the business situation and outlook indicated the upturn in business to be more than temporary with the prospect it would continue during the summer without usual seasonal decrease.

N. Y. Bank Stocks Close June Higher

After reaching levels close to the 1933 highs established in early January, New York City bank stocks turned downward in June, Hoit, Rose & Troster report. The weighted average of 17 leading issues opened June 1st at 48.89, the low for the month, reached the month's high of 60.85 on June 12th and closed June 30th at 51.82, a net gain on the month of about 6 per cent.

Wool Competition Is Good in London

London, July 5 (AP)—There were 10,415 bales of wool offered at the auction today of which 9977 were sold. The fine selection offered met with strong competition at firm prices. All fine wools are now being quoted at 20 to 25 per cent over closing rates of the May series.

New Highs Are Set in Chicago Grains

Chicago, July 5 (AP)—Wheat, corn and oats all jumped to new high price records at the outset today and then underwent material setbacks. Buying was based largely on reports of continued major crop losses, with Canada included.

ROLLER SOCCER AT SKATE FETE

The first exhibition game of roller soccer will be played at the Boston Arena on July 22, as a feature of the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser skating derby.

Five players compose each team and all players will be on skates. The game is played in the same manner as ordinary soccer, but as the players are on skates it is much more exciting and a lot faster. Spills are frequent, as the ball cannot be touched by the hands. To kick a ball on roller skates may seem easy, but if you think it is try it some time. William M. Riley of Brockton, a roller skating enthusiast, will act as referee.

Among the late entries for the derby are:

Otto Muellea, 11 Ninth st., South Boston; William Collins, 11 Wrentham st., Dorchester; J. J. Marvan, 29 Marcella st., Roxbury; Mary Agnes McCabe, 17 Carolina ave., Jamaica Plain; Janice E. Smith, 12 Springdale st., East Saugus, and Warren Thiessen, 20 Field st., Roxbury.

Colonial Hooked Rug

By LAURA WHEELER

PATTERN NO. 451

Hooked rugs and patchwork quilts go together. They not only are both essentially American handicrafts, but their use together in Colonial days associates them both with old American furniture.

Like patchwork quilts, hooked rugs are most frequently made of scraps of materials; the antique hooked rug was always made of scraps which often were dyed to suit the color scheme planned. Fascinating to do, this simple pattern is adapted from an old Colonial rug, and is 16 x 23 inches.

A larger rug can be made by adding an additional border. Pattern No. 451 includes a transfer pattern of the design with the colors indicated on the pattern, as well as illustrated directions for making the rug step by step.

Send 10c for this pattern to Boston Evening American Needlecraft Dept., 82 Eighth Ave., New York City.

HELP WANTED—MALE

MEN
If you are interested in making more money, increasing that income, getting into permanent independence not affected by seasons, providing properly for your family—it you are a real worker of good character, between 28 and 45 preferably—then this opportunity concerns you. We will give time for a personal interview to such men.

Our company is rapidly approaching, in this country, the complete dominance of market it has already secured in other countries, with five European and American factories continuously busy supplying the Electrolux unit (not refrigeration.)

Men in this business, from all walks of life, are big earners. When they learned this profitable business thoroughly, their income ranged around $2,000.00, $4,000.00, $6,000.00, $7,500.00, and more, per year, yet they had no previous experience in this kind of work. For instance, A. Orvis who made $90.00 for his latest week reported was formerly an aviation instructor; N. J. Cowles, who earned $70.00 that same week, was previously a clerk; O. L. Sullivan, who made $115.00 for the week, also came from an entirely different line of work; a former farmer made $135.00 for the week, while a man with only a few days' experience made over $40.00 that same week.

However, beginners may have to be content for a while with $125.00 to $200.00 per month. You are placed on the same basis of compensation as the others, AND MAKE NO INVESTMENT OR DEPOSIT. 1933 will be our fourth consecutive record sales year.

If you measure up to these requirements—are a good learner and a hard worker, reliable, neat, business-minded—call at 315-318 Metropolitan Bldg., 260 Tremont St., Thursday morning only.

According to J. P. Morgan, "Modern parliamentarians seem responsible for the orgy of overspending, giving to people benefits for which they have not worked and to which they are not entitled." Maybe so. But a voter might hope he could reciprocate.

IT IS MIGHTY DISCOURAGING

(Lamar, Mo., Democrat)

Rudy Widmar, of Mulberry, who was taken to the penitentiary a short time ago, for stealing coal from the Austin shovel, writes a letter from the Algoa Farm, where he was taken the day the sheriff turned him over to the prison authorities at Jefferson City.

We have all kinds of good eats, Rudy said. The quarters for those out of door prisoners are built on a high hill overlooking the Missouri River, and it is on a big farm. Rudy talks as if he really liked to stay.

Things seem to be getting better all right. But we'll have to wait awhile before we know for sure whether or not the guys-who-say-things-are-getting-better have gotten any better.

FUN ON THE FRONTIER

Or the Saga of Sweeney's Gulch

By Calamity Bella

Note—Yestiddy Aunt Bella's grandpa told how his client, Hard Hearted Mazie, shot down Mike Gumboil rather than let him open a saloon in Sweeney's Gulch. Today he tells how the town met the situation:

Some there were cried: "String her up!" The town decided then
That this was not the thing to do our West, where men are men;
They compromised by holding court next morn at half past ten,
And Mazie was my client, while the judge was Shifty Ben.
I sure did sweat at Mazie's threat to plug me if I lost,
And hastened to get witnesses for her at any cost;
I coached them high, I coached them low, while I did nigh exhaust
Myself to teach that dame to screech enough to thaw a frost.
The jury pew had quite a few of Gulchtown's sagest brains:
The Two-Gun Kid, Big Butch, a Yidd, the Chinese cook, Chow-Meins,

Save Our Shade Trees

Forest Army Should Fight Gypsy Moth

Our selectmen and tree wardens tell us that since times were hard, they have not invaded private property, destroyed the moth and assessed the cost upon the owners, who have had enough burdens to worry them.

The moth was a vexatious pest in this state only twenty years ago, causing extensive damage to property and irritation to human comfort.

So great was the damage then caused that we adopted the anti-moth laws and campaign, calculated to prevent a repetition of this nuisance.

You can measure the material value of a tree as timber, but you can never approximate its worth as a thing of beauty in the scheme of Nature. Life on a treeless plain or unsheltered valley would hardly be worth living. The tree should be preserved for the spiritual and material comfort it affords.

We have recruited an army of young men at public expense and developed them into a forest army.

They could well be put to work in eliminating the moth pest, even if upon the private property of citizens who cannot afford to bear the expense at this time.

Before planting new trees which will take years to come into the full bloom of beauty, let us preserve the beautiful shade trees which are now one of the finest assets of New England.

Fishing and a Saint

Gloucestermen Need Your Orders

St. Peter, the humble fisherman, is their patron saint.

They give thanks to him, not so much for rich catches as for their safe return from the perils of the sea.

If these God-fearing men were not so devoutly religious, as most brave men are, they might feel that St. Peter had deserted them.

They make long and hazardous trips to The Banks, and return with holds packed with fresh fish, only to find there is no satisfactory market for them. They are deeper in debt than before they filled the seine with mackerel or pulled the ground fish into the dory.

These men may not fathom the laws of economics, but they know by instinct at least that their burdens are the superficial works not of St. Peter but of alleged statesmen.

The tariff is made to benefit industry; it labors against them. Foreign nations drop their currencies, and competing fish come across the borders from low-wage workers. Their own American market is glutted, when it should be reserved to them.

Their fellow American citizens, who appreciate their arduous and perilous labor, can help them, even if the statesmen fail. Buy their products. BUY AMERICAN. The fishermen will thank you for it with as fervent prayers as they utter to the Saint who sees them safely home.

New England Speech

Plenty of Variety

The American Council of Learned Societies is making a linguistic atlas of the United States and Canada.

We of New England are supposed to be quaint.

So, they have sent a corps of investigators here to find out why we call it "coal hol" in Massachusetts and "coal scuttle" in Connecticut, where the Dutch influence prevailed, or "closet" in Vermont for "pantry" on Nantucket.

Surely, we can give them variety. They can take the broad "R" at Havahhd. Then the nasal twang, "Mornin', nabor," in Maine. On Hanover Street, they can get "Ripa" da ba'nan," soft and fluid as the most tuneful dialect on the lower Mediterranean.

Put them all together and they spell New England—a very fine and united section of a very fine Nation.

Sardines and Beer

Maine Canneries Re-open

Reports tell us they "are doing a very large business."

Beer is back, and the free lunch with it.

Let the Russian have his caviar, the Dutchman his spiced cheeses and the Frenchman his numerous tid bits.

But take a hot day, a cool glass of beer and the piquant flavor of a succulent sardine, wedged between two crackers, and you tempt the palate of the true American epicure.

Anyway, men have gone to work in the sardine plants again.

Lawyers Tell Us

How to Be a Good Witness

A Boston lawyer gave this advice to his witnesses, just as the case was about to be called in court.

Don't be nervous. Don't be foolish. Don't be irascible. Don't be vain. Don't be verbose or long-winded.

The lawyer might put himself in the place of the witness. And ask himself how much he would tell if he saw a gang of professional gunmen lurking in the shadow of the courthouse, and knew the incompetency of the police to give him protection.

Unbearable Burdens

By Nelson Harding

We can burst the bonds that bind us
To the burdens we have carried;
We can ease our aching shoulders
Of the crushing weights placed on them

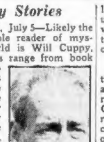

By our stupid legislators.
If one great weight can be cast off
By a strong, determined effort,

New York Day by Day

Mystery Stories

NEW YORK, July 5—Likely the most indefatigable reader of mystery in the world is Will Cuppy, whose diversities range from book reviewing to burlesque skits on the home life of the ask. He has read every mystery story published in the past 10 years, including translations.

O. O. McIntyre

His life is submerged among the push-button flats on the fringe of Washington Square, and the glamours of Broadway are as remote as his personality. When he drops a note to friends, he signs himself, "The Old Hermit."

Now and then, when pressed, he will turn out a book and bury himself in some isolated post with a huge pile of thrillers until his royalties exhaust. Unsmiling, he has a quaintly dry humor and a flair for similes. His "Nutty as a fruit cake" is an example.

To many Cuppy's sheltered life would seem a synthetic curdle. Somebody tells me when he becomes extraordinarily bored he drops into one of those catch-penny bazaars on 14th street to test his skill against a checker player who meets all comers. And that beats literary teas all hollow.

* * *

There are many recluses among the scribbling fraternity. Until golf claimed him. William MacHarg was a pronounced isolationist. His intimate friends would not see him for months. Edward Arlington Robinson, the poet, is not known by sight to more than a score of writers. Gil Patten, at height of Frank Merriwell fame, spent most of his time alone in the Maine woods. Royal Brown prefers solitude. And, of course, there's that shyest of the shy, J. M. Barrie.

Incidentally, Vernon McKenzie balloons my list of authors who dictate their stuff: E. Phillips Oppenheim and Coarno Hamilton. They also sport monocles, by Jove!

* * *

Perhaps the most distinct contrast from Will Cuppy's cloistered career is that of E. Phillips Oppenheim. His study overlooks the blue of the Mediterranean and he's at his desk every morning dictating until 12. Then he motors along the Corniche road to a terasse table at some Monte Carlo cafe, where he adjusts his monocle, sips his aperitif and watches the chic bloc luncheon gaiety. After lunch, golf until sundown and dinner, for which he always appears in white-tied splendor. Then a tour of the casinos. And so to bed!

* * *

As a pursuivant of thrilling fiction, I've often wondered if other addicts, too, find it impossible to read detective fiction or a chance Oppenheim in daylight. I can only read such stuff in bed—"by a candle glow, with the world shut out."

* * *

Frank McHugh, expert drunk and wise guy of the movies, returned to New York recently after three years in Hollywood. Everywhere people stopped to stare. He had long appeared in prominent Broadway roles, but few recognized him. New York is like every other town. Local boys must go away to be acclaimed.

* * *

There's invariably something strained about Broadway welcoming home a successful wanderer, but Wilson Mizner used to say it was done with two motions—a back pat and a quick touch.

No One Loves Doormat

ALL HER LIFE she has "done things for other people"; never expressed her own desires; never insisted on her own rights. She has just lived for her family; served their interests.

Elsie Robinson

And now she is getting old. Not really old in years. Only 40. Most modern women are still young at 40. But not poor Mrs. Gray. She looks, she feels 90. A bleak and bitter 90 filled with resentment and self-pity.

For what thanks does she receive for devoting her life to other people, flattering them, waiting on them "hand and foot"? No thanks at all! Her husband's bored. Doesn't try to hide it. Actually treats her as if he had a grudge against her; as if she'd wronged him, somehow, instead of wronging her. And her children are just as bad. They ignore her—won't listen to her advice—go off and leave her when she starts crying. Oh, how can people be so cruel and ungrateful!

A familiar picture? You know a person like that? And you suppose you should feel terribly sorry for him or her, don't you? But, somehow, people like that always get your goat. Maybe you're hard-hearted.

No, you're not! People like that SHOULD get your goat! They get life's goat!

Because those services do not really meet our need.

What is it we need most, value most, in those who are nearest to us?

Is it something they do for our bodies? Or something they do for our spirits?

It is something they do for our spirits. For a hungry spirit is infinitely more troublesome than a hungry stomach. One can nearly always rustle food, somehow. But it's the deuce of a job to rustle enthusiasm, inspiration, laughter, fresh hope and pride and courage.

We love those most who do most for our lives.

Why do families despise and ignore the door-mats who "never think of their own interests but slave hand and foot" through the dreary years? Why do they vaguely feel that such door-mats are contemptible—because they somehow cheat those who depend on them.

BECAUSE THEY ACTUALLY DO CHEAT THOSE WHO DEPEND ON THEM.

Mrs. Gray has given her husband 23 years of perfect housekeeping, complete sacrifice and slavish yessing. Yet she has never given him the one thing he wanted—the thing he expected when the courted and married her.

SHE HAS NEVER ENLARGED HIS LIFE, QUICKENED HIS INTEREST, RELEASED HIM FROM HIS FEARS, CHALLENGED HIS COURAGE.

She has been a door-mat. Why should he be grateful to a door-mat? Why should he respect anything which doesn't respect itself?

She has been an echo—reiterating his ideas, repeating his commands. Why should he be charmed by something which is but a tiresome repetition of himself? What he wanted—what he expected to get—was someone who was different and who, by her very difference, would extend his own boundaries.

Just Folks

What's the Difference

An old and battered car beside
A limousine of pomp and pride.
And out from each fly children two
To see the creatures at the Zoo.

Now at the lion cages stand
Four children, almost hand in hand;
Same ages; same delights, desires,

The lion neither notes nor cares
Nor can the strange long-necked giraffe

Four children to their parents say:
"We've had a happy holiday!"

'The Prophet of Doom,' Latest to Set Date for End of World—Science Is More Cautious

—By Edwin C. Hill—

The man who predicts that the world will come to an end this year lives at Freeport, Long Island. His name is Robert Reidt, and they call him "The Prophet of Doom." Just a year ago he startled the nervous, and such as carry uneasy consciences beneath their waistcoats, with the round assertion that October 19, 1932, would resound to the notes of Gabriel's trumpet.

But when the old world went on about its business, the "Prophet of Doom" was not the least discountenanced or discouraged. He went over his calculations, based, he says, upon the Book of Revelations, and now renews his baleful prediction that this year will see the end of everything.

"Before the year is out," says Robert Reidt, "the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also, and the works that are therein shall be burned up." Science is quite ready to affirm the possibility of such a catastrophe, but is cautious about setting any date nearer than a few hundred million or billion years from now.

For a thousand years there have been these prophets o doomsday, and some of them have terrified whole nations. In the year one thousand all Christendom looked for the end, on January the first. The rumor spread that Christ would appear on Mount Zion. An immense throng flocked there, having first sold all their earthly possessions.

Stoeffler, a German astronomer, predicted in 1533 that the world would be destroyed by a deluge. Believers emulated Noah. A wealthy Parisian built himself a raft, which he stored with provisions to last six months. Finally the appointed day arrived. At seven in the morning Stoeffler began preaching his last sermon. He advanced twenty-two arguments to prove that his theory was true. The clock struck. "Lo! It comes, it comes!" shouted the prophet. But it came not. The people held their breath with awe. Stoeffler, peering from the church door, spied a cloud and shouted again: "Behold, it cometh from the clouds!" Again he was wrong. Fear turned to anger. The people dragged the prophet from his pulpit and soused him in a neighboring duck-pond.

But the greatest of all these sensations occurred in 1844, when William Miller of Pittsfield, Mass., preached with fiery fervor that the world would come to an end between the 13th and 22d of October. The poet, John G. Whittier, heard Miller preach and described the scene in his diary. "The white circle of tents," wrote Whittier, a good reporter, "the dim, wood arches, the upturned earnest faces, the loud voices of the speakers, burdened with the awful symbolic language of the Bible; the smoke from the fires, rising like incense from forest altars. And suspended from the front of the rude pulpit, a canvas sheet bearing the wonders of the Apocalyptic visions; the beasts, the dragon, the scarlet woman, the mystic symbols, all translated into staring Yankee realities and exhibited like the beasts of a traveling menagerie."

In March of that year, 1844, Fr. Miller closed the diary of his public labors, believing he would never have to open it again. But March went out in its usual lamblike way, and April came and passed and saw not the heaven in anguish. When May arrived the poor old man was heard confessing his error, but not his disbelief. October would yet witness the fulfillment of his prophesy.

In the interval between the 13th and the 22d of October all worldly business was put aside by the Millerites, or Second Adventists. Thousands bought white muslin for ascension robes. Tradesmen shut up shop and gave away their goods. Multitudes knelt in prayer half the day and half the night, while they turned to the peaceful blue sky or the tranquil stars their apprehensive gaze.

Finally the sun rose on October 23d. Nothing happened all day, and at nightfall the sad prophet could only say: "I have fixed my mind on another time, and here I mean to stand until God gives me more light."

Except for Prophet Reidt of Freeport, Long Island, the most recent of the prophets of doom was Lee T. Spangler, a grocer of York, Pennsylvania. At the age of 12 it was revealed to him in a vision that the world would perish in fire and smoke in October, 1908. When he became a grown man he revealed his message to his neighbors. Leaving his wife behind him, he went to Nyack, New York, with his chief priestess and a crowd of believers. Solemn preparatory services were held.

The priestess revealed that Prophet Spangler had found, in the second verse of the sixth chapter of Revelations, a distinct reference to Theodore Roosevelt, who had ridden a white horse up San Juan Hill, had conquered and had been crowned. Therefore, it was perfectly plain that the end of the world would arrive before nightfall. But twilight came, and then dark. The night grew colder and colder. The damped and chilled believers melted away. And so did the prophet. A few days later he was discovered living quietly at home with his wife, dispensing butter and eggs as of yore.

Leniency to Home Owners

Banks Asked to Delay Foreclosure

These banks have been formally and definitely asked not to foreclose mortgages upon homes of less than $20,000 value until the Federal Home Owners' Loan Act has a chance to become operative and to prove its worth.

Interestingly enough this request for leniency is not made to the banks by any little group of agitators or defaulters but by four banking organizations of which most of these banks happen to be members.

Their purpose is very evidently to save the little home owners from annoyance and distress and from the loss of the humble property they have erected by a lifetime of labor and frugality.

No doubt you are becoming increasingly familiar with the purpose and the prospective operation of the home loan act.

This plan will take over your mortgage from its present holder and will give him bonds of the government corporation in exchange; bonds that are backed by the soundness of the government itself.

The mortgage holder will derive a liquid and guaranteed asset. The home owner will derive a lower rate of interest. He will be spared the threat of foreclosure. He will be enabled to borrow for payment of his taxes and for the upkeep of his property until his income approaches normalcy.

Surely the purposes of this plan are so noble and salutary that the banks should accede to this request without hesitation.

Many of the banks have themselves demonstrated a very fine leniency toward the home owners in distress. Now they can afford to do so in contemplation of the government's intention to take off their hands such of these assets as may have been regarded as frozen.

We look to the banks to make a generous reply to this request in behalf of our citizens who are home owners.
